'Kingpins' In Gambling Facing Quiz, Senators Say

'Go Ahead' Signal For Probe Expected Shortly; Wiley Urges House-Senate Attack

By the United Press

Senators mapping a national crime investigation said yesterday they will question some of the top "kingpins" in gambling and the rackets if Congress approves their proposed inquiry.

Simultaneously, Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) proposed that the inquiry be broadened into a joint Senate-House effort to assure an all-out assault on "the multi-billion-dollar crime syndicates."

A Senate Judiciary Committee already has approved the investigation, which was demanded by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.). He predicted yesterday the full committee and the Senate will give him the "go-ahead" signal soon.

Kefauver said he will try to get the full committee to act today. Meantime, he said, his own personal staff is "collecting lots of information and facts" on the scope of organized crime in America.

Greatly Encouraged

Kefauver said he is greatly encouraged by the support of Attorney General J. Howard McGrath's crime conference which met here last week.

Wiley, ranking Republican on the Judiciary Committee, told a reporter there is "an excellent chance" the committee will act on "some version of legislation for a full investigation of interstate gambling and racketeering."

"It is quite obvious that present legal weapons available against the multi-billion dollar crime syndicates are hopelessly obsolete," he said.

This is true, he said, "particularly for our puny 'pop-gun' methods of coping with gambling syndicates which rely on interstate wire and telephone facilities for their widespread operations."

Suggests Joint Committee

Wiley suggested, however, that the committee consider establishment of a joint Senate-House committee to make the probe. He gave two reasons:

1. There would be a tremendous amount of "waste motion" if a Senate group, after lengthy hearings, suggested legislation and then a House committee had to hold "almost identical hearings to evaluate our proposals."

2. "It is important that we concentrate all our facilities against the big shots and that we mobilize the full weight of the FBI and other investigators in this process."

Wiley said the Federal Treasury is losing billions of dollars in po-

Crisp Weather Predicted Today In District Area

Washington today is in for some more crisp winter weather—courtesy of a cold front from the Northern Plains States.

Temperatures will be near freezing, the Weather Bureau said, and the day will be windy and mostly sunny.

Forecasters expected temperatures to drop to 20 in the suburbs and 25 in the city last night, then climb to the middle 30s in the afternoon.

Yesterday's bright skies brought the usual number of visitors to "Foggy Bottom" shrines. Park police said auto traffic and the number of Washingtonians out for an afternoon walk was unusually heavy.

Victim Prisoner of Japs

Ex-Officer Slain Near Luray; Wife Arrested on Suspicion

By William H. Smith and Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporters

Luray, Va., Feb. 19.—A former Army captain, who had retired to a farm "plantation" near here after suffering the horrors of Japanese imprisonment, was found shot to death in the bedroom of his home early today.

His slim, red-headed wife of 26 was held without bond on suspicion of murder after she hysterically notified a neighbor, according to police, that her husband was shot "in an accident."

The victim was former Capt. Robert Franklin Parks, 38, of Stanley, Va., 8 miles southwest of Luray.

Sheriff Abram Brubaker of Page County said Parks' wife, Barbara, has given conflicting accounts of the shooting.

At one point, the sheriff said, Mrs. Parks told him:

"They'll call me a murderess. I'm no murderess. I'm not that type."

Brubaker said Parks' body was

Arlington Man Dies in Double Auto Shooting

Sheet Metal Worker Tried to Kill Her, Woman Tells Police

An Arlington widower died at Arlington Hospital last night and a widow was in the same hospital, apparently not in serious condition, after both were found yesterday afternoon with bullet wounds in their heads.

Relatives of both said they had been "going together" for two years.

They were identified as Charles Elmer Cartwright, 45, of 600 N. Piedmont st., an unemployed sheet metal worker, and Mrs. Clara Biggs Burkley, 37, of 1035 N. Stewart st., a Veterans' Administration employe.

Arlington Police Pvts. Richard Frederick and Leroy J. Rasmussen said that when they arrived in answer to a call, they found Cartwright unconscious and slumped over the wheel of a coupe. Mrs. Burkley was outside the car, wandering dazedly.

Pistol in Glove Case

She had a wound in the left side of her head, and he had one behind his right ear, the policemen said. A .32-caliber pistol was in the glove case of the car.

Mrs. Burkley told them "he was going to take his life and my life also. I don't know why." They said the car was parked near 5731 N. Carlin Spring rd., Arlington, which is in a semi-isolated area near Lubber Run Park.

Frank Biggs, brother of Mrs. Burkley, reported his sister was able to talk to him. He said she told him Cartwright fired at her first, and that "only a quick movement" saved her life. Biggs said she told him Cartwright then shot himself.

Neither Mrs. James E. Small, Cartwright's mother, with whom he lived, nor Biggs could give any reason for the shooting. They said no notes were found. Mrs. Small revealed Cartwright has a daughter, Mrs. Hazel Moore, of Norman, Okla. Biggs said his sister has two children, Edward, 12, and Carol, 5. She was widowed three years ago, Biggs added.

Small Business Outlook Is Good, Sawyer Says

Secretary of Commerce Charles W. Sawyer said yesterday "the outlook is good" for small business.

The future is particularly bright for a person who wants to open a business of his own, Sawyer said in a broadcast.

"Since the end of the war, thousands of veterans have gone into small businesses of their own and are operating them successfully," he said. "I believe small business must exist and prosper,"

Plans Drawn To Shift Capital If Bombs Fall

Holifield to Offer Resolution Today on Alternate Site Study

By James M. Warner
NYHT News Service

A secret plan already exists for operating the national Government in the event the Capital City is bombed, it was learned last night as a Congressman proposed creation of a high-level commission to study the feasibility of establishing an "alternative seat of government."

Representative Chet Holifield, (D., Calif.), a member of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, announced he will introduce a joint resolution for the study in the House today because:

"The heart of Washington can be destroyed and a large percentage of its inhabitants killed or injured by one atomic bomb strategically exploded by an enemy power. In that eventuality the nerve center of our Nation would be paralyzed."

His resolution proposes that the commission, which would report not later than next January 31, will study the best possible site for a "secure" alternative seat of Government, possibly with underground structures, what copies of documents should be made, and what procedures should be followed in naming successors to a President, Vice President, and members of Congress who become "unable to perform duties as the result of attack by a foreign power."

The secret study, entitled "Security of the Nation's Capital," is

AF Top Command Starts 'Operation Cowboy Boots'

Cowboy boots, sandals, moccasins and other non-GI footwear are now under attack by the Air Force top command in its effort to maintain uniformity of dress among men and officers, it was learned yesterday.

The Bolling Beam, publication of the Bolling Air Force Base, revealed that the newest orders prohibit Air Force men from wearing shoes that do not conform to rigid specifications: black, plain toes, smooth leather and laced.

Perforated or winged caps as well as uppers that come higher than the ankle bone are out.

The publication also stated that in the future, topcoats or overcoats will be just long enough to cover the bottom of the kneecap of the wearer.

Drive on Metal Shipments

22 Trucks Seized by Russians At Checkpoint Outside Berlin

Berlin, Feb. 19 (AP).—Russian authorities seized 22 trucks at their highway checkpoint outside Berlin tonight in an effort to block all metal shipments on the road to western Germany, United States Transport Chief C. A. Dix reported.

Beginning this morning, the Russians held truckloads of metal and metal products, whether they were leaving Berlin for western Germany or carrying cargoes for East Berlin, Dix said.

This latest Soviet move came within 24 hours after the fourth Western Allied protest against Russian interference with Berlin highway traffic this year.

The American, British and French commandants, in a letter yesterday, told Soviet Maj. Gen. Alexander Kotikov that the Russians are making "a calculated attempt to restrict the normal movement of persons and goods."

In his only reply to the Allies, on February 4, General Kotikov asserted there were large-scale smuggling activities in highway traffic, and Soviet border guards, therefore, had to make a detailed inspection of all vehicles.

Drivers arriving here said even Soviet zone trucks carrying metal supplies for the Russian sector had been seized by the Russians. This indicated the seizures were part of an antismuggling drive by the Soviet and East German authorities.

Congressman Faces County Court Today

Officials' Offers For Release on Personal Bond Are Turned Down

While Prince Georges County officials conferred last night about Representative Frederick L. Crawford (R., Mich.), the 62-year-old legislator bedded down for his second night in jail on an assault charge.

Crawford determinedly refused efforts of friends to obtain his release yesterday after authorities refused to accept $200 cash collateral for him after his arrest on a warrant Saturday. He offered up to $50,000 on Government bonds. Authorities said they could accept only real estate or surety bonds for his release.

However last night, Hall Hammond, Attorney General of Maryland, told them a 1949 legislative enactment permits them to accept cash bail if it is tendered.

A. Gwynn Bowie, states attorney for Prince Georges County, and Justice of the Peace Irving Traband, who refused the cash proffer, held a two-hour conference in Bowie's office.

But Crawford was still in jail.

Crawford Refuses Again

After the conference, about 10 p. m., Traband again went to the jail and offered to release Representative Crawford on his personal recognizance or on cash bail, provided he signed a paper agreeing to appear in court.

Traband said that Crawford again refused a release which entailed signing any paper, said he would remain until this morning, and that he "wanted to go back to sleep."

After the conference, State's Attorney Bowie said that in such a case, a cash bail bond is permissible, but either that or personal recognizance requires signature to the appearance agreement. It is not a case of cash collateral which may be forfeited, he said.

"When the Justice of the Peace called me Saturday," Bowie said, "I was awakened in the night and asked whether a person charged with assault and battery could post cash collateral for his appearance for trial. I expressed the offhand opinion that there was no authority for such procedure.

Has Release Power

"After getting the facts in the Crawford case straight, I have today advised the magistrate that he has the discretionary power to release Mr. Crawford on his personal recognizance because he is a property owner in the county. I understand Mr. Crawford has been advised of this and has refused to sign any recognizance paper."

Through his secretary, William H. Hackett, Crawford asserted that his insistence on staying in jail is a "matter of principle."

After a perusal of law-books last night, Hammond, said that Chapter 240 of the session laws of 1949 changed the previous regulation requiring real estate or surety bonds and denying the right to cash bail.

He said that law empowered courts and magistrates over the entire State to accept cash bail for release of prisoners. He said as soon as he found the situation, he telephoned Bowie, and Justice of the Peace Traband to inform them of the law.

Crawford was arrested Saturday on an assault warrant sworn to by Horatio (Ray) Hanbury, 22, former amateur and professional boxer, GI law student, protege of

Chinatown Greets New Year With 'Crackers' and Dragon

Almost a thousand spectators lined the streets of Washington's Chinatown yesterday to watch the conga-line gyrations of a dancing dragon officially, but tardily, welcome the New Year.

Later in the evening, the venerable fathers of the community, all over 70, gathered at the Cathay Restaurant, 624 H st. nw., to celebrate the occasion to the strains of sing-songed ceremonial music on primitive bamboo instruments.

Everyone knew the Chinese lunar New Year of the Tiger began Friday, with the first new moon after the sun's entrance into the constellation Aquarius.

But no one was sure what year it is. A few thought it might be 2494, dating from the birth of Confucius. Others suggested 4895, dating from some emperor or other.

However, the event followed the traditional lines, patterned after two decades of celebrations here, and thousands of years in China.

Shortly after 2:30 p. m., a huge leather drum on rollers began a rhythmic beat near Fifth and H sts. nw. Several youths dressed in the red and blue of the Chinese flag began with clang gongs and crash cymbals.

Firecrackers signaled the appearance of the dragon, consisting of two men. One held the enormous multicolored, grinning skull high over his head while the other hid under a long cape. They weaved and wheeled, menacing the crowd with angry grimaces.

Gifts of money attached to lettuce, vegetable of luck, dangled from store fronts. As the dragon weaved up to the bait, he was aroused by a barrage of firecrackers, chasing away evil spirits. Then the store owners stepped forward to greet the dragon and feed him.

The money, said George Moy, Mayor of Chinatown and secretary of the On Leong Merchants Association, will go toward the aid of unfortunate Chinese in this country.

ECA Planners View Britain As Sore Spot

Hill's Dissatisfaction With Kingdom Declared Periling Aid Budget

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Economic Cooperation Administration officials, seeking authorization and funds for a third year of the Marshall Plan, believe that their greatest difficulty will arise from congressional dissatisfaction with British economic policy.

Many Congressmen believe that Britain has been insufficiently cooperative in steps toward European integration. Many others are deeply antagonistic to the socialism of the Labor government.

As a result, ECA officials anticipate congressional attempts to amend the foreign aid law. They fear that crippling, or administratively impossible restrictions aimed at forcing changes in British economic policy will be proposed.

Quite aside from the administrative problems that such condition-setting amendments might create, the psychological reaction to them in Europe could be completely destructive to the program, some ECA policymakers believe.

The hearings on the ECA authorization begin Tuesday. ECA chief Paul G. Hoffman and Secretary of State Dean Acheson will appear before a joint session of the Senate Foreign Relations and House Foreign Affairs Committees.

On its own part, the ECA itself will propose only a few amendments to the present Foreign Assistance Act. Most of these are minor.

One important proposal, however, would give the ECA authority to allocate about 400 million dollars of the total funds appropriated to a central European payments clearing institution.

At present, ECA can allocate Marshall Plan money only to the individual nations participating in the program. But these nations hope to set up a central agency to permit a much broader flow of trade. It would accomplish this by extending credits to debtor countries in intra-European trade, and financing the exports of creditor countries.

An attempt to set up the payments plan and its central clear-

U. S. Pays 12c for Empty Bags It Sold for 1c Full of Potatoes

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Uncle Sam has been buying for 10 to 12 cents apiece empty burlap bags that the Agriculture Department recently sold for one cent filled with 100 pounds of potatoes.

This latest of the almost unbelievable stories growing out of the Government's fantastic multi-million-dollar potato-buying program was related to members of Congress last week.

It grew out of testimony by Harry I. Rand, 917 15th st. nw., general counsel of the National Burlap Bag Dealers Association, before a Senate Agriculture Subcommittee.

The sacks, which cost an average of 22 cents apiece when new, were reportedly bought by the Army Engineers for use as sandbags in the Mississippi River flood area.

At the Department of Agriculture officials said that this story had not been related there. They admitted, however, that the transactions probably took place and were no more fantastic than many they already knew about.

One official said there were numerous cases on record where potatoes were bought for livestock feed on which the buyer made a profit of 1000 or 1200 percent on the bags alone. Sometimes, it was said, they didn't make so much. Sometimes, particularly if the potatoes were partly spoiled, the bags had to be cleaned before being resold.

Rand told the Senate committee that many potato growers use second-hand bags when preparing their spuds for commercial markets.

"Soon after the Commodity Credit Corporation set up its potato price-support program," he said, "it announced that potatoes packaged in second-hand bags would have 10 cents a sack deducted from the support price. Quite naturally, a shift from the second-hand to the new sacks resulted at once.

"The potato farmers, though aware of the suitability of the second-hand bags, could hardly be expected to buy them at 7 to

Six Give Election To Conservatives; All Expect Close Race

London, Feb. 19 (AP).—Ten of 20 political experts in Great Britain forecast a Labor victory in Thursday's general election.

Six see a Conservative win.

Four say the race is so close they wouldn't hazard a guess.

All foresee a narrow margin for whichever party wins.

The Associated Press sought the views of 18 of the nation's leading political journalists and the strategists of the two principal minority political parties.

Both Laborites and Conservatives predict victories for their side, in statements for home consumption.

Of the 20 polled, seven said their forecasts might well be upset by political oratory in the closing days of the campaign.

The writers questioned represented practically every shade of political opinion.

Miners Stay Away, Risk Contempt Citation

Defiant Strikers Ignore Second Call Of Lewis; U. S. Ready For Court Action

BULLETIN

Pittsburgh (Monday), Feb. 20 (U.P.).—Embittered soft-coal miners courted contempt of court action today by ignoring a direct order from John L. Lewis to return to work and end their economy-wrecking strike.

A survey of mines in western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Illinois showed midnight shifts failed to report as scheduled.

By The Associated Press

With every sign pointing to a continuing coal strike, the Administration yesterday laid plans for court contempt action against the miners' union.

A second call from John L. Lewis, boss of the United Mine Workers Union, for a back-to-work movement of his 372,000 striking soft coal diggers seemingly was going widely unheeded because he had no contract for them.

Moment Is Main Question

The main question seemed to be when the Justice Department will act. If the miners stay out today, Government attorneys may seek contempt action right away—or they could wait until Tuesday, just to make sure the strike is still on.

Attorneys handling the situation declined to talk. It was indicated they would have a huddle this morning on their next move.

Lawyers for the Government and Lewis will be in court today, anyway. They will argue before Federal Judge Richmond B. Keech on whether to convert Keech's present 10-day restraining order against the strike into an 80-day injunction. The restraining order expires Tuesday.

All Orders Ignored

The present court order was issued Saturday, February 11. Lewis on the same day messaged the miners that he had no choice but to tell them to return. The miners ignored both the court's and Lewis' orders. Lewis sent out new back-to-work instructions Friday.

Negotiations between the coal mine owners and Lewis, as ordered by Judge Keech, began last Wednesday. They have been fruitless. However, Government observers led by David L. Cole, chairman of President Truman's inquiry board, have said the parties at least began discussing the issues. The bargaining talks are due to be resumed at 2 p. m. today.

Lewis has pushed new demands into the bargaining—to replace those which Judge Keech has

Union Meeting Fight Sends 4 to Hospital

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—A wild, fist-swinging melee at a downtown meeting of CIO National Maritime Union members sent four persons to the hospital today.

After New Mainland Drive

Chiang Promises He Will Put Stalin on Trial as 'Criminal'

Taipei, Formosa, Feb. 19 (AP).—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek today promised a Nationalist offensive on the Chinese mainland in the near future, execution of Communist chairman Mao Tze-tung and eventual trial of Soviet Prime Minister Stalin as a war criminal.

These assertions were contained in 100,000 leaflets scattered over Red coastal cities by Nationalist warplanes to coincide with the lunar New Year celebrations.

Chiang did not disclose how he intended to reinvade the mainland, from which he was driven only last December, but indicated he was counting on internal uprisings and a new world conflict to help him make good on his promises.

"I well realize that you are leading the lives of slaves under the rule of darkness and violence," his statement said.

"I will come to your rescue with real action in the near future."

Condemning the new alliance between Red China and the Soviet Union, Chiang said, "Mao Tze-tung has sold China to imperialist Russia. He has given your life and property, your food, your culture, your treasures—the whole of China—to Stalin as capital for World War III."

Foreseeing victory in such a conflict, Chiang then said Mao would be executed and Stalin would be tried by an international court.

Dire Picture Given Of H-Bomb Effects

Administration Hit

Reds Treated 'Softly,' Says Gabrielson

Republican National Chairman Guy George Gabrielson accused the Administration tonight of being too soft with "Communist attitude" among officials here and of failing to recognize fully the Red threat in general.

He offered the criticism in a discussion of the recent statement of CDP policy. Gabrielson, interviewed for a broadcast said: "In that (the policy statement) we condemn the failure of the Administration to recognize fully the danger of this threat (of communism) to our security, we deplore the dangerous degree Communists and fellow travelers have been employed in important Government positions, and the fact that information vital to our security has been made available to alien agents and persons of questionable loyalty, and denounce the soft attitude of this Administration toward Government employes and officials who hold or support Communist attitudes."

He denied the policy statement signals a return to party pressure for high protective tariffs. He said Republicans believe "promotion of world trade on a basis of fair and reasonable competition" can be accomplished without setting terms that "will imperil the standards of living of the American workingman or the American farmer, or that will threaten serious injury to our domestic economy."

Chicago, Feb. 19 (U.P.)—Radioactivity from hydrogen bomb blasts could be made to kill every living thing in an area 1500 miles wide and 3000 miles deep, an atomic scientist of the University of Chicago said today.

Harrison S. Brown, speaking on the university's round table broadcast, described a method of using prevailing winds to carry out a scorched-earth policy on a staggering scale.

If the hydrogen bomb works, he said, "it is easy to visualize a series of hydrogen bomb explosions carried out along a north-south line at about the longitude of Prague, Czechoslovakia."

The radioactivity would be carried eastward by the winds, destroying all life in an area from Leningrad to Odessa and from Prague to the Ural Mountains, Brown said.

He said it would take about three days for the radioactivity to pass the Urals, where it would begin losing intensity and by the time it crossed the Pacific to the west coast of North America it would be harmless.

But Brown said the process could be reversed to cover the United States in a matter of four or five days.

He said the explosions could be set off in a north-south line in the Pacific about 1000 miles west of California.

"The radioactive dust would reach California in about a day and New York in four or five days, killing most life as it crossed the continent," he said.

The scientist said some human beings might survive if shielded or if wearing masks to filter radioactive dust. But that animals and vegetation would be destroyed.

"If the bomb works at all," he said, "there may well be no upper limit to the size of the explosion that may be created." But he said the destruction due to radioactivity could far exceed that due to the blast.

Brown said "all human beings should hope that it (the bomb) won't work," but that "we can do little except assume that it will work."

Pastor Urges H-Bomb Moral Responsibility

An Episcopal clergyman yesterday urged his congregation to begin thinking of the moral responsibility of deciding when and how the hydrogen bomb should be used if it is ever needed.

Speaking at Trinity Episcopal Church, 7005 Piney Branch rd. nw., the Rev. Robert S. Trenbath declared that America faces a "critical point in its Christian history."

He expressed the hope that if America ever has to use the hydrogen bomb, the action will "be one of mature judgment with a sense of responsibility to God and not a quick decision."

Mr. Trenbath said he approved of President Truman's decision to go ahead with manufacture of the hydrogen bomb because "it would be difficult to stifle scientific curiosity without it."

He urged his congregation to "think as our Christianity wants us to think—in terms of belonging to all peoples of the world."

The Russians, Mr. Trenbath said, "are wrapped up in the same bundle of life as we are, and we have a moral responsibility towards them."

Veterans especially should take an active interest in applying their Christian principles to the issue of world peace "since they above all have won the right to be heard," Mr. Trenbath, a former Air Force chaplain declared.

Mr. Trenbath also urged the United States to "bend every effort to achieve international control of all atomic and hydrogen energy."

If international control of atomic energy is not achieved, he said, it will be largely Russia's fault because she has walked out on discussions of control in the United Nations.

It is known, however, that the document discusses in considerable detail what governmental agencies could be dispersed out of the Capital, and what measures can be taken for protection of officials and preservation of Government in the event of a bombing. It is said to have reached conclusions, and to include both long and short-range planning.

While no board official will admit it contemplates evacuation of the entire Government from Washington, it is known such discussions went into its preparation. Following the beatification, Pope Pius XII, appearing recovered from his recent mild attack of influenza, venerated the woman. He knelt before her picture for 15 minutes. Afterward he was acclaimed by the pilgrims and faithful.

Bill for Registering U. S. Reds Prepared

By The Associated Press

A bill intended to force the registration of 54,000 card-carrying American Communists is being whipped into shape for early Senate action.

Senators Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.), Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) and Olin D. Johnson (D., S. C.) are working on the bill in the hope of getting it before the Senate within the next two weeks.

Mundt told a reporter that FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover has approved the measure as one way to "drive the Communists above ground." Hoover has estimated there are 54,000 Communist Party members in this country.

Mundt also said:

1. The FBI is ready in an emergency to "break up the nerve centers of communism" in the United States.

2. One out of every 10 Communists in the country is under watch by the FBI as a "dangerous" subversive.

3. At least 4000 to 5000 Communists would be arrested or jailed within 24 hours after this country went to war.

The Mundt-Ferguson-Johnson bill originally was introduced in the Senate last year. But the three sponsors are revising it to meet objections raised against it and other anti-Communist measures.

"The bill won't outlaw the Communists or the Communist Party," Mundt explained. "But it will apply to them the same Government regulations which govern the political activities of Democrats and Republicans."

An Appeal To The Members of Congress And The Public

Congress has been asked by the Secretary of the Treasury to impose a special $40,000,000 extra tax burden on the American television industry.

This extra tax burden will have the effect of seriously retarding the television industry at a time when it promises to be one of our strongest forces in maintaining and stimulating employment and good business conditions.

The radio components of television sets now pay a manufacturer's excise tax. This tax on radio and television in 1949 amounted to $40,600,000.00. An additional tax of 10% on television sets would constitute a special, extra tax burden on the television industry.

The proposal of the Secretary of the Treasury to add another 10% excise tax on television sets is inconsistent. It runs contrary to administration-sponsored proposals for the reduction or elimination of excise taxes on furs, transportation, amusements and numerous other wartime excise levies.

As Secretary Snyder so aptly said, on February 3, 1950: "Excise taxes on business costs tend to be pyramided through successive mark-ups by those handling goods in the various stages of production and distribution. The cost of living of all consumers is increased out of proportion to the tax imposed. In addition, the taxes thus added to the prices of goods and services generally are the most burdensome on the lower income groups."

The proposed excise tax on television sets would result in fewer sales. Industry experience has shown that a reduction of 10% in TV set prices widens the market by at least 20%. But the reverse is also true. If a 10% excise tax is imposed on television, forcing an increase in retail prices, the potential market will be reduced accordingly. Fewer people will be able to afford a television receiver and will thus be deprived of television programs.

Television is a new, growing and highly competitive industry. It has reduced prices 50% within the last three years. It is striving zealously to continue to reduce the cost of television sets to the consumer. In the same period in which the industry has brought about these extraordinary reductions in prices, it has been constantly improving the quality of its product. The quality, variety and extent of television programs have been advanced.

These things have been done despite difficulties arising from the Federal Communications Commission's "freeze." Under this "freeze" policy, the Federal Communications Commission declined to authorize or permit the building of any additional television broadcasting stations until other involved policy questions are determined. This seriously restricts the market for receivers and of itself reverses the trend toward lower prices. The proposed 10% excise tax would further restrict the purchase of sets by the low income buyer in the present market.

This proposed new excise tax on television might well mean less revenue than the Government now is getting from the television industry. Such a reduction in the television business might well result in a loss of income and employment, causing losses in over-all tax revenue exceeding possible gains from the proposed excise tax.

The proposed tax would be a heavy blow to the television industry. It will decrease the sale of sets, limit the quantity and quality of television programs, ruin many small manufacturers, and adversely affect all business in many areas. The loss to our economy will far overshadow the tax collected by the Government.

We ask the Congress not to approve this unwise proposal.

U. S.-Bulgar Break Reported Imminent

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Feb. 19 (U.P.).—Forty-three Americans in Sofia have been alerted for a possible break in diplomatic relations between the United States and Bulgaria this week, reliable informants said tonight.

The United States is expected to hand a note to the Bulgarion Minister in Washington — probably within 48 hours—setting a time limit for cancellation of the Bulgarian order for expulsion of United States Minister Donald R. Heath, informants said.

The United States has been waiting one month for Bulgaria to answer its original note demanding cancellation of an order for Heath's expulsion.

Accused in Anti-Red Plot

The Bulgarian regime charges Heath with implication in a plot to overthrow the country's Communist government.

Deputy Bulgarian Premier Traicho Kostov was hanged in Sofia as guilty of conspiracy to overthrow the government with United States, British and Yugoslav aid. In Kostov's trial the prosecution alleged that Heath was one of those involved in the "conspiracy." Heath's recall was demanded.

Heath denied the charge, and the United States warned Bulgaria that diplomatic reltaions would be broken unless an order for his recall was withdrawn.

American officials are understood to feel that the death of Bulgarian Premier Vassil Kolarov, a few days after the United States note was delivered, might have caused some delay in a reply. But it is held that there is no longer any excuse for failure to answer.

State Department Silent

Americans in Sofia have said in telephone conversations that the members of the United States legation staff and their dependents —a total of 43 persons—probably would leave Friday unless the Bulgarian government unexpectedly capitulated to the United States demand.

[The State Department in Washington refused to comment yesterday on reports that the United States may break off diplomatic relations with Bulgaria this week.

[Informed diplomatic quarters told the United Press, however, that a rupture would "certaily fit into the pattern" of recent U. S.-Bulgarian dealings.]

U. S. Explains

No Strings To Tito Aid, Allen Says

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Feb. 19 (AP). — United States Ambassador George Allen said today there would be "no political conditions" attached to any American financial aid for Yugoslavia.

His statement was prompted by a question during an interview relating to Premier Marshal Tioto's speech yesterday in which he said Yugoslavia would "rather go barefooted" than sacrifice its socialist principles in return for aid.

"As I pointed out when I presented my credentials," Allen said, "the policy of the United States is strict noninterference in the internal affairs of Yugoslavia. No political conditions were attached to the credit already extended to Yugoslavia and no such conditions are attached to the credits now under consideration."

(Aid now under consideration includes a credit of 25 million dollars plus 11 million dollars from the Export-Import Bank and the World Monetary Fund.)

Tito, apparently irked that there had not been speedier action on financial aid, told a meeting of 50,000 persons that Soviet-led Cominform countries have constantly played the "same tune" that Yugoslavia is seeking aid from the "reactionary" forces of the West.

He said, "We have asked for nothing of late, but only said they should give us what they promied."

So far as is known here, there have been no public revelations from the West that loans have actually been promised.

German Service Called Hazard to GI Morals

Frankfurt, Feb. 19 (AP).—Most American soldiers occupying Germany are too young for the moral hazards to which they are exposed, in the opinion of Maj. Gen. Roy H. Parker, chief of United States Army Chaplains.

"When I return to Washington I shall consider recommending that only men in their second enlistment period, or older, be assigned to duty in Germany," General Parker was quoted by the United States Army newspaper Stars and Stripes.

Vogeler Testifies at 'Spy' Trial

Prosecutor of Vogeler Masses 'Spying' Damage Witnesses

Budapest, Hungary, Feb. 19 (AP). Prosecutor Gyula Alapi marshalled technical witnesses today to testify on the damage done to Hungary by the alleged spying and sabotage of American businessman Robert Vogeler and six co-defendants.

Interest will center on this phase of the spy trial when it resumes Monday, together with the large list of American and British legation personnel, army and intelligence officers and other prominent persons whose names have been brought into the case.

Vogeler, 38-year-old vice president of International Telephone & Telegraph Co., asked for a mild sentence yesterday after pleading guilty. He declared he used his business connections as a cover for professional intelligence activities, and that nearly all American businessmen in eastern Europe were required to turn in intelligence reports to the United States.

His six co-defendants confessed to similar charges. They were Edgar Sanders, a British official in the Standard Electric Co., Hungarian subsidiary of I. T. & T.; Imre Geiger, Hungarian manager of the company; Zoltan Rado, a section chief in the Hungarian Ministry of Heavy Trade; Edina Doery, hotel barmaid and telephone operator, the Rev. Istvan Justh, a Catholic pries, and Klemen Domokos, chief accountant for the Standard company.

Alapi, who prosecuted Josef Cardinal Mindszenty and Laszlo Rajk, former No. 2 Hungarian Communist, was expected to make the most of the defendants' admissions that company production was limited deliberately and deliveries to Russia were sabotaged.

(Former business associates of Vogeler have speculated that the underlying purpose of the trial was to furnish an excuse for the Communist-dominated government to seize I. T. & T. properties in Hungary.

(His friends abroad expressed disbelief in the confession he recited in the Peoples Court yesterday. They said his calm attitude was not in character, and that dates and other events mentioned in his testimony did not square with the known facts).

Most prominently mentioned in Vogeler's testimony was Col. Sosthenes Behn, chairman of the board of I. T. & T.

After describing the Standard Company as under United States Army control, Vogeler said he visited this country in 1948 in company with Behn for secret conferences with some of the other defendants.

He described Behn as a prominent banker and personal friend of President Truman, Secretary of State Dean Acheson, Gen. George Marshall, Former Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau and other well known Americans.

Vogeler said he had instructions to seek especially for information about radar, rockets, uranium deposits and atomic experts who might be spirited away to the United States.

The Hungarian press seized on this testimony yesterday, and said Vogeler and the other defendants were the "vanguard of a new world war."

Tibor Eckhardt, Noted Hungarian, To Speak Here

Dr. Tiber Eckhardt, Hungarian statesman and friend of Cardinal Mindszenty, will address the Charles Carroll Forum of Washington Tuesday on "The North Atlantic Pact and World Peace."

Eckhardt

A former member of the Hungarian Parliament and a delegate to the League of Nations, Dr. Eckhardt will speak at 8:30 p. m. in the Sapphire Room of the Mayflower Hotel.

His opposition to the Nazis forced him to leave his country in 1941, and he is now considered a number one enemy of Hungarian Communists.

U. S. May Ask Delay In Ending Reich War

By the United Press

The United States was reported yesterday about ready to advise the Western Allies to put off a proposed declaration terminating the state of war with Germany.

The State and Justice Departments are winding up a four months study of the proposal advanced by the British. Informed officials said there will be exchanges of views with the British and French this month and forecast that the United States will propose shelving the idea for the time being.

For one thing they say it would mean that Congress would have to concur and also revise or re-enact a mass of domestic legislation based on continued existence of a state of war.

More than 200 statutes still have this emergency basic and will be automatically repealed when Congress votes that the war is legally over, the study disclosed.

Included are the rent control law, wartime reorganization of the Army and the Trading With the Enemy Act. Others were found to be less general in effect.

In addition, there are what Government lawyers describe as "odds and ends" of law still in effect under two proclaamtions of a state of emergency. Those two proclamations, one issued in 1939 and the other in 1941, remain in effect.

Some 200 laws and parts of laws depending on them were repealed by Congress in 1947 at the request of the President.

The first big step to take off wartime controls was taken December 31, 1946, when President Truman by proclamation terminated the state of hostilities. Government powers under some 20 statutes were terminated immediately by that action, and powers under 33 other laws ended six months later.

What is expected to be stressed to the British and French is that ending the state of war now promises few practical advantages; it might create new difficulties for the occupation authorities, and it should be postponed until it can be used to trade for closer cooperation from the Bonn government.

However, should Russia take the lead by declaring the war to be over as far as Moscow is concerned, Western action might be speeded.

Withdrawing of occupation forces and immediate drafting a peace treaty are not involved in the proposal. It was advanced unexpectedly in November by the British at the Paris meeting of the Big Three Foreign Ministers.

Arctic War Training for 15,000 Urged

With Canadian-American Maneuver Forces in Yukon Territory, Feb. 19 (U.P.).—Lieut. Gen. Stephen J. Chamberlin, commander of "Exercise Sweetbriar," today said the U. S. Army should train at least 15,000 men for Arctic combat.

At the same time, he said that any troops deployed in the frozen North would need absolute air superiority, or they would be easy prey to enemy aircraft.

Chamberlin said the need for unquestioned command of the air was "the biggest lesson" learned thus far in the winter war games being played in the Yukon by Canadian and American ground and air units.

The U. S. Fifth Army commander was interviewed at his improvised command post at the junction of the Donjek River and the Alcan Highway, where he is directing the maneuvers.

Chamberlin said the 15,000 men who should be trained for Arctic combat would be the numerical equivalent of one division and should be organized into three regimental combat teams. The regimental team has been found an ideal unit for relatively easy movement in the Yukon.

Chamberlin said that without bulldozers the troops are unable to move off the Alcan Highway to any great extent, and that on the highway they are "sitting ducks" for enemy aircraft.

He noted that Canadian and American planes, including jets, have had excellent daily serviceability rates despite bitter weather.

But Chamberlin and most other officers have been disappointed in the performance of the American "Weasel," a snow-traveling vehicle. The commander said the development of an adequate over-snow vehicle was "of first importance."

Hill's Antagonisms to British Seen Hurdle for ECA Budget

ing agency failed at a Marshall Plan meeting in Paris last month. But negotiations are being resumed in London this week, with good prospects of success.

Like all other Federal agencies, the ECA will be confronted with congressional demands for economy. It can expect, therefore, to see its present request for $3,100,000,000 cut down somewhat. Its problem will be to prevent the cut from going too deep.

Some weeks ago, the ECA also anticipated trouble in the form of proposed amendments forcing much of the ECA funds to be used for the purchase of United States surpluses, mostly of agricultural products.

Now, however, the indications from Capitol Hill are that this will not be such a formidable problem. No doubt some attempt will be made to require that the European countries accept farm products as part of the aid they get, but it is thought that these proposals can be defeated.

It is reported that Senator McClellan (D., Ark.) will reintroduce the amendment he offered last year or something similar to it. It would have required about 40 percent of the total money appropriated to be spent on farm commodities declared to be in surplus.

The McClellan amendment was defeated only after the heads of the three largest American farm organizations denounced it in a joint statement.

After the joint session Tuesday, the two congressional committees will hold separate hearings.

On Wednesday, the House committee will begin its sessions. It expects to continue them for three weeks, with sessions four days each week.

The Senate committee will begin its hearings either Wednesday or Thursday, and continue a week or 10 days.

Next Monday, February 27, the House Appropriations Committee will also begin its hearings on ECA, in order to get the appropriation into the omnibus money bill. These hearings must be concluded by March 15.

Besides ECA officials in Washington, top executives from Europe have been assembled here to be available as witnesses.

Among those who will be heard are Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, American Marshall Plan chief in Europe; and ECA mission chiefs Barry Bingham (France), W. John Kenney (United Kingdom), and J. David Zellerbach (Italy).

Another witness will be Robert Hanes, High Commissioner John J. McCloy's administrator of ECA and economic operations in Western Germany.

D.C. Home Rule Foes Differ on Referendum

Representative Thor C. Tollefson, (R., Wash.) yesterday expressed the opinion that "a vast majority of District residents would vote for the Kefauver bill," if a referendum were taken.

His opponent in a home rule discussion over radio station WQQW, Maurice J. Nee, disagreed, remarking that such a referendum would surprise the advocates of the Kefauver bill.

Meanwhile, Herbert P. Leeman, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, reported letters from Congressmen "are pouring in," in reply to his recent letter asking them to sign the petition to get the Kefauver bill out of the House District Committee. Most of the letters are favorable to home rule, Leeman said.

The petition for the Senate approved measure, Leeman said, "has reached the stage where we may have the 218 signatures as a Washington's Birthday present." More than two-thirds of the required signatures have been obtained, he said.

Post-ECA Situation Discussed, Bevin Says

London, Feb. 19 (U.P.).—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin disclosed in an election speech tonight that Britain already is discussing with the United States the "situation" that may arise after Marshall Plan aid to Europe ends in 1952.

Addressing a Labor Party campaign rally at Croydon, near London, Bevin said:

"The Conesrvatives ask what Labor is going to do in 1952 when Marshall aid ends.

"It would be perfectly silly of me to say that I could tell you. We know Marshall aid will come to an end. We know we have got to meet it.

"We are already discussing with the United States the situation that may arise."

Bevin did not elaborate this brief disclosure.

Both Laborites and Conservatives have intimated in election speeches that some kind of American aid will be necessary after 1952.

Our 75th Anniversary

From Horse and Buggy . . .
. . . to Diesel Trains and Jet Planes

From the Cracker Barrel and Coal Stove to Modern Food Retailing

Seventy-five years ago, Magruder's was established on New York Avenue, between 14th and 15th Streets. The business grew, and is still growing with Washington. Changes in shopping habits and areas required that we change the address of our main store several times, and to provide additional facilities by the opening of our two branch stores, but we strive to maintain the same friendly service established by the founder, which has become a Washington tradition.

Many of the same family names which first appeared on the founder's books are on our records today, a fact of which we are very proud, indicating that the second and third generation have found that the combination of fine foods at attractive prices is still a sound business philosophy.

Rep. Crawford Balks Moves to Free Him

Crawford, and resident in a tenant house on Crawford's farm at 7531 Allentown rd., Allentown, Md.

Hanbury charged that Representative Crawford, who is 62, struck him in the mouth, during an argument on the Crawford farm. Neither disclosed cause of the altercation. In a statement after his arrest, Saturday, Crawford admitted "slapping" the young man.

The Congressman is due to go before Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie in Marlboro Police Court at a session opening at 10 a. m., today. Originally, his hearing was set for Friday, but authorities moved it up when it became evident Crawford intended to remain in jail.

First person, aside from newspapermen, to attempt to see Representative Crawford, yesterday, was Representative H. R. Gross (R., Iowa). He was refused admittance because of a "no Sunday visitors" rule.

Sasscer Calls

Then came Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.), in whose county the alleged assault, the arrest, and the imprisonment took place.

Representative Sasscer was admitted. He said afterward that he offered to go on a property bond for Representative Crawford and obtain his release, but Crawford refused.

Next came Justice Traband. Representative Gross went in with Traband.

Traband said he had decided to release Representative on a personal bond because Crawford owns property in the county and Traband was convinced he would appear for trial.

He handed Crawford the personal bond paper, he said, and asked him to sign it. Instead of signing, Crawford put the paper in Traband's pocket and asserted that "there's a principle involved." Traband and Representative Gross left.

Next came Hackett, Crawford's secretary. After a conference with Crawford, he emerged and issued this statement. He said it had Crawford's approval:

"The press has stated that the Justice of the Peace at Marlboro has finally decided 'he would turn his back on an old practice and free Mr. Crawford on cash bail, right or wrong.' Mr. Crawford said he isn't interested in being a party to an illegal scheme while someone's back is turned.

"Officials charged with law enforcement surely know the terms for releasing defendants under bond. If not, for the protection of the public, they probably need some new officers.

"If cash bond was illegal Saturday night when we presented the required bond in cash, then it is surely just as illegal 24 hours later.

"Citizens of other States, like Mr. Crawford, now know that when they are taken in by the law in Maryland, they are either the prey of professional bondsmen, or go to jail unless some Maryland property owner comes to their rescue."

The latter part of the statement apparently referred to th fact of which Crawford complained Saturday, that a professional bondsman was sitting behind the rail in the police station when he was brought in.

The bondsman is William Griffith of Marlboro. He sat there again yesterday. He said, and officers confirmed, that he is a substantial property owner in the Marlboro area. He has no office, but spends considerable time around the police station. He said yesterday he has been in the bonding business for more than 20 years, and that his fee is $5 per $100 of princapal of a bond.

Saturday night he offered to put up bond for Crawford without fee, but Crawford declined the offer.

Crawford was in a "bullpen"—in the jail yesterday with nine other prisoners. One was charged with driving while drunk, one with assault on his wife, another with assault, and the others with being drunk, or with disorderly conduct.

The Michigan Congressman apparently was enjoying himself with them. He sent Hackett out to buy apples, candy, razor blades, and other small articles for them.

On the bail-bond question, he apparently was not squeamish for another prisoner. He instructed Hackett to contact the wife of the man charged with driving while drunk so that she could arrange bail bond.

Jail attaches said he ate jail fare for breakfast—eggs, scrapple, and coffee. Prisoners get no luncheon.

Hanbury, who swore to the warrant, boxed as an amateur and professional here. He is now in his second semester as a law student at Southeastern University, and works part time in both Representative Crawford's office and farm.

Leeman to Coordinate Sesqui Civic Activity

Herbert P. Leeman, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, will be coordinator of all civic organizations, clubs and citizens and patriotic groups for the Sesquicentennial.

Leeman's appointment as the Sesqui's chairman of the Civic Participation Committee was announced Saturday. He said he would begin at once to formulate plans for such a committee.

Bottle Club Probe Goes On

More of the affairs of Washington's after-hours bottle clubs will be dragged up publicly today as a special House subcommittee investigating crime here resumes hearings at 2 p. m.

Operators or officers of 13 of the clubs are under subpena, and only a few of them were covered at an inquiry session Friday. As a result, Albert B. Glickfield, alias Al Brown, president of the Gold Key Club, and Henry W. Davis, his accountant, were instructed to return today with more of the organization's records.

Edward P. Messerole, formerly with the Gold Key Club and now with the Stagecrafters Club, another late spot, as well as Iatinic Ferrone, president o fthe latter organization, are among others scheduled to testify.

In addition to the 13 places where subpoenas were served by police and a committee investigator, summonses are out for other late drinking places, but no information was available as to whether additional ones have been served.

Persons who visited some of the after-hours places Saturday night said that requirements for entrance had been "considerably tightened up," but that so far as was known, none had closed its doors as a result of the investigation.

Retired Psychiatrist Found Unconscious

Dr. Burton A. Thompson, 66, a retired psychiatrist, was found unconscious yesterday on a stairway in the apartment house in which he lives at 3010 Wisconsin ave. nw.

Police said the man lives alone and they were unable to determine how he became unconscious. He was taken to Georgetown Hospital with head injuries. Doctors said his condition was satisfactory.

Ex-Captain Slain Near Luray; Wife Arrested on Suspicion

found after midnight. Nude, except for socks, the lower half of the captain's body was covered with a sheet, he said. The dead man's head was resting on a pillow.

The sheriff said the shooting apparently took place between 11 p. m. and midnight:

Mrs. Parks, he explained, came to the home of a neighbor, Fred Cave, just after midnight. Cave said she hysterically told him Parks was shot and she was sure he was dead.

Return to Farm

Mrs. Parks, accompanied by Commonwealth Attorney I. R. Dovel, who met her at the Cave home, returned to the Parks' farm. They were joined a few minutes later by Brubaker and Coroner Dr. George Long.

Dr. Long pronounced the man dead. He said death apparently came instantly from a single bullet that penetrated Parks' right arm, passed through a lung and entered the upper part of the heart.

Brubaker said the death weapon, a .32 caliber automatic, was found in the dining room adjoining the bedroom. There were no powder burns on the body, he revealed.

Mrs. Parks, he said, could give no explanation of what the gun was doing there.

Weapon to Go to FBI

The weapon, along with Mrs. Parks' fingerprints, were to be forwarded to the FBI in Washington Monday.

The Parks' 8-year-old son, Bobby, was staying the night with the captain's mother, Mrs. E. C. Decker, in Stanley.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ROBERT F. PARKS

. . . In uniform during war

Mrs. Parks told a deputy sheriff that she was not in the bedroom when she heard a pistol shot, and passed through two rooms before finding her husband.

But to Brubaker she said the gun went off as Parks was showing her how it operated.

There apparently were no signs of a struggle in the home. But police said there were evidences of a party in the living room. Several partially filled glasses of beer and a nearly mpty fifth of whisky were on a table.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Stroup, also neighbors of the Parks, said they spent part of the evening with the couple after the captain had promised them "some good home brew."

When the Stroups left the home, they said, the Parks seemed to be on good terms. The two couples earlier in the evening had planned to go to a square dance.

Mrs. Decker said her daughter-in-law separated from Parks about two years ago. The cause apparently was the unimproved condition of the "plantation." But Parks, she said, had modernized the home and Mrs. Park returned a few months later.

No Charges Placed

Commonwealth Attorney Dovel said no formal charge will be made against Mrs. Parks pending an inquest Monday.

Brubaker said the .32-automatic had been fired only once, with the empty cartridge jammed in the ejector so that it could not be fired again.

Mrs. Decker said Parks purchased the farm in 1945, when he was discharged after 21 years in the Army. He had received training as an engineer at Fort Belvoir, Va., but shortly before World War II transferred to the Air Corps.

He was in the Philippines when war came and was taken a prisoner by the Japanese. In his more than three years as a POW, he was aboard two prison ships which were torpedoed, she said. Parks was retired from service on disability pay as the result of wounds received in the war.

Neighbors said Parks returned to the Shennandoah Valley, as scene of his boyhood, to escape the effects of the war.

Sheriff Brubaker said Mrs. Parks, apparently dazed by the night's events, mumbled almost incoherently during her questionings that:

"This is all just a dream, I'll wake up tomorrow."

8 cents apiece less than new ones, when they were penalized 10 cents for doing so.

"This shift took place when the Government was selling vast amounts of these potatoes to alcohol, starch and flour manufacturers and livestock feeders at 1 to 5 cents per 100-pound sack.

"To add insult to injury, these alcohol and flour manufacturers and livestock raisers would resell the new bags at a handsome profit."

Rand said that as a result of appeals by his association, the Agriculture Department on August 16 changed its regulations to permit second-hand bags.

"I am certain this new policy has resulted in a significant reduction in costs to the Government," Rand told the committee. "But some Commodity Credit Corporation field officers are not as economy-minded as their Washington superiors. Only recently reports came to me from some of our Western members that the new policy is constantly being ignored by regional offices.

"Carloads of surplus potatoes are still being packaged in new bags and the United States is still paying the new bag allowances on potatoes eventually dumped or sold for a pittance to institutions, livestock breeders and alcohol makers."

Rand said Government purchases of beans in Michigan are being packaged in new bags, although second-hand bags are available at much lower prices.

Top officials of the Production and Marketing Administration said last night that PMA had had "some bitter experiences with second-hand bags, especially when used for export."

"When we buy potatoes and other items," Frank K. Wooley, deputy administrator of PMA, said, "we start out on the premise they will be resold through the normal channels of trade. We can't use old bags in that case."

Woodley said the department had had "some nasty deals" in buying second-hand bags for shipping commodities to the Army for use in occupied areas abroad.

tential taxes because secrecy cloaks the underworld's "take" in gambling, slot machine and other activities.

"At the same time, it is obvious that no investigation will achieve real results unless it rips into the rotten heart of the tieup between gambling syndicates and crooked politicians in State capitals and city halls," he said.

"Merely arresting a few tinhorn gamblers has been done too many times, while the real 'big shots,' well protected by tie-ins with crooked office-holders, have invariably escaped the net."

He added that the inquiry would be ineffective unless accompanied by a "public awakening of the evils of gambling and a public crusade for effective enforcement of existing State and local laws."

Kefauver said he has an "open mind" on the question of a Senate-House investigation. He pointed out, however, that no proposal for such a probe has been sought in the House.

Contempt Action Is Planned If Miners Stay Out Today

ruled are probably illegal under the Taft-Hartley labor law.

The UMW chief is now asking a 200-day-a-year work guarantee for miners, as well as seniority provisions to protect jobs. This is in addition to his requests for sizable boosts in the present $14.05 daily wage and 20-cent tonnage royalty for the miners welfare fund. He also is asking a half-hour reduction in the present eight-hour day.

Voting to Stay Out

All indications from the field were that the majority of the miners would continue their strike.

At least ten UMW locals representing some 8000 southwestern Pennsylvania diggers have officially rejected Lewis' second back-to-work order. Other locals refused even to meet to discuss the order.

There have been no reports of any of the 372,000 soft coal miners voting to return to work.

Here in Washington, John D. Battle, executive vice president of the National Coal Association, said all reports indicated a continued stoppage.

"I can't prove it," Battle told a reporter, "but I think the real dope is that Lewis hasn't sent out the right signal yet to get the men back to work. That's my belief anyway."

Beyond the immediate problem of court contempt action, officials were worried about what to do if even a whopping fine against the UMW's 13-million-dollar to 20-million-dollar treasury fails to get the men back.

Many Government lawyers were reported feeling that Lewis himself is probably clear of contempt this time, or at least has a good legal defense, because of his two back-to-work messages following Judge Keech's order.

Lewis personally has been fined a total of $30,000 and the UMW $2,100,000 in past contempt proceedings. The union paid the Lewis fines.

Telephone People in Washington Earn Good Wages

If Wages Were Raised Again

We Would Have to Ask for Higher Telephone Rates

—beyond the rate increase now pending

Recent surveys prove that The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company pays good wages — wages that compare favorably with those paid by other concerns in Washington for work requiring comparable knowledge, skill and capacity.

Telephone Wages Have Gone Up TWO Ways

1. Telephone employees receive regularly scheduled raises, generally at three, six or twelve month intervals, until they reach top pay for their jobs. This year, for example, more than 50% of our employees will get one or more raises under existing contracts.

2. Telephone people in Washington have received seven general wage increases since 1939, which have boosted their average wage rates by 97%. During the same period, the cost of living in Washington has gone up only 68%.

Wage Increases Have Been Far More Than Rate Increases

The present annual cost of these seven general wage increases is $10,900,000. Increases in the rates you pay for telephone service have made up only about one-fifth of these wage increases, not to mention other higher costs of doing business.

Telephone Wages Are Paid By Telephone Customers

Even with the rate increase now pending, there is no margin in the Company's earnings to absorb further general wage increases. So there is only one answer . . .

Another General Wage Increase Would Mean Another Request for Higher Telephone Rates

The telephone business is regulated in a way that Unions and most other businesses are not. Federal and State Commissions determine the rates we charge for telephone service.

Telephone rates are related, of course, to the cost of providing the service, and wages make up by far the greater part of this cost.

In Washington, local telephone rates are regulated by the Public Utilities Commission. And any further general increase in telephone wages would again force us to ask that Washington customers pay an increase in rates — beyond the rate increase which is now pending

Sex Crime

Another step toward more enlightened procedure in handling sex crime has been proposed by Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital. It is to afford court privacy to children who testify against persons charged with sex crimes. Because parents want to save their children the embarrassment of appearing in open court many sex offenders escape prosecution, or are merely charged with disorderly conduct. Dr. Overholser would either extend to sex crime hearings a modified use of juvenile court practice, which bars the public, or have judges clear courtrooms for these hearings.

Society has been laggard in handling the whole sex crime situation. It now is belatedly recognizing that many sex offenders need psychiatric rather than punitive treatment. But it is still primitive in its system of making sex crime hearings occasions for the entertainment of the morbid and prurient minded. Such hearings, certainly when child witnesses are involved, should be handled with the same privacy that unfortunate children who land in juvenile court are now at last accorded in most communities.

Such a system should aid greatly in prevention of sex crime. More minor offenses would be reported, more prosecutions made. Offenders who need treatment would be caught earlier, and many dangerous habitual offenders might be spotted before they committed shocking crimes of violence. Once parents of youthful complainants were guaranteed freedom from public embarrassment for their children, and parents generally educated to the need of cooperation with authorities in this field, much greater safety would be insured for all children.

Dual Schools

Circuit Judges Prettyman and Clark have affirmed a District Court judgment validating Washington's segregated school system. Judge Edgerton, whose brilliant dissent in the restrictive covenants case was adopted unanimously by the Supreme Court, has disagreed with his colleagues again, arguing that segregation is, in fact, discrimination and that, as applied to the school children of the District of Columbia, it amounts to a deprivation without due process of law in violation of the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution.

The issue arose out of two suits seeking an injunction which would permit Negro students in the overcrowded Browne Junior High School to attend the junior high school nearest their homes which would guarantee to them educational opportunities, facilities and equipment equal to those afforded white students. They do not have such opportunities, facilities and equipment now. According to Board of Education figures, the Browne School in October, 1947, when one of the suits was brought, had an enrollment of 1836 with a capacity of 888. The nearby white Eliot Junior High School had an enrollment of 765 with a capacity of 918. This is by no means an atypical situation. All the colored junior high schools in the city had a 1947 enrollment of 8420 with a capacity of 6510, while the combined white junior high schools had an enrollment of 10,303 with a capacity of 12,033.

The Board of Education has done the best it could to remedy this inequality within the confines of a segregation policy. It transferred pupils from white elementary schools to Eliot and put many Browne pupils in the vacated elementary buildings. But these elementary buildings lack vital facilities for junior high school training. The Court of Appeals majority has justified the action of the Board of Education as an expedient designed to meet a temporary problem which will be solved in time by new construction. But it will not be solved in time to save the current crop of Negro junior high school pupils from serious disadvantagement. And the inequality is made no less injurious by the fact that the Board of Education does not mean to discriminate against Negroes. Integration affords the only present remedy.

All of this, moreover, misses the main point made by Judge Edgerton, that segregation in schooling is itself discriminatory and injurious. The majority rests its position logically enough on the "separate but equal" fallacy coined by the Supreme Court in 1896. It remains for the Supreme Court, in this or one of the other educational segregation cases before it, to overrule a mischievous doctrine that has remained in force far too long. Segregation imposes a badge of inferiority on Negroes because it is intended to do so. It has no rationale save that Negroes are inferior and unfit to mingle with whites. As Judge Edgerton points out, "Instead of serving a public purpose it fosters prejudice and obstructs the education of whites and Negroes by indorsing prejudice and preventing mutual acquaintance." And he provides an apt answer also to those who protest that Washington is not ready for a democratic school system: "It has been too long forgotten that the District of Columbia is not a provincial community but the cosmopolitan capital of a Nation that professes democracy."

Agriculture And ECA

The second annual OEEC report should dispel any lingering hopes that western Europe will in the future provide export outlets for surplus American farm products on the scale of the early postwar years. Owing to the lack of fertilizers, the destruction and flooding of land areas, and successive crop failures, European agricultural recovery got under way slowly after the war. Since 1947, however, the OEEC points out, there has been a marked rise in output. The estimated production of bread grains and coarse grains is now close to prewar levels, while production of eggs, fats, and oils is rapidly approaching prewar totals. Since there are about 10 percent more people to be fed, however, further increases in output are essential if the people of ECA countries are to be adequately fed, according to prewar standards.

However, the OEEC expects an increasing proportion of the foodstuffs and agricultural raw materials consumed by western Europe to be supplied from its own farms and through increased imports from overseas territories of participating countries. The aim is to cut down buying of farm products for which dollars have to be paid, and reduce that gap between dollar imports and exports that will still be alarmingly large when ECA aid is no longer available. While western Europe will be dependent on imports from North America for the indefinite future, a steady decline in the degree of that dependence is anticipated. The OEEC's agricultural studies "show that if appropriate policies are followed, an expansion of output would be possible which would permit a saving in imports of one billion dollars or more, additional to those contemplated in the long range program submitted in 1948."

There is no expectation of achieving any such savings by 1952-53, but the goal might, it is believed, be reached by 1955-56. The main increases would come from expanded production of animal feedstuffs, grass and root crops brought about by land reclamation, improved agricultural methods, increased use of fertilizers, and better use of feedstuffs. In overseas territories developmental projects will also lead to an expansion of production and larger export of coarse grains, vegetable oils, cotton and other agricultural products.

It is worth noting, too, that although the consumption of cotton is rising, ECA countries are trying to save dollars by increasing their purchases of cotton from nondollar sources, and by expanding the production of artificial fibers. In the immediate prewar period, for instance, the consumption of artificial fibers was only 9½ percent of the total consumption of all three fibers—cotton, wool, and the artificial product. By 1950-51 artificial fibers are expected to amount to more than 20 percent of the whole.

It is easy to decipher the handwriting on the wall. The OEEC report is clearly a warning that as ECA aid tapers off western Europe will have to develop alternative sources of supply to avoid the hardships resulting from the necessity of cutting down dollar imports. In the long run that is the only kind of program that will lead to the development of the kind of dollar-saving production that will provide the basis for a return to multilateral world trade. In the process of adjustment we shall lose some export outlets for our products; but, as the OEEC notes, "the more alternative sources can be developed of commodities that can economically be produced outside North America, the more freely will participating countries be able to import other commodities from North America."

One More Confession

Robert A. Vogeler, an official of the Hungarian branch of the International Telephone & Telegraph Co., has confessed to being a professional spy for the United States. As in the case of Cardinal Mindszenty, who made his confession before the same judge, Americans take for granted that the confession was extorted by those sinister forms of pressure that totalitarian governments customarily employ to secure convictions. One should remember, too, that the trial was reported by a Hungarian correspondent of the Associated Press, the Hungarian government having refused to permit the American AP chief, with headquarters in Vienna, to enter the country.

Business associates and intimates are prepared to testify that many of the statements contained in the confession are untrue. In 1942, for example, when Mr. Vogeler said that he became a spy, he was living in Illinois and was not in the employ of the I. T. & T. His further statement that I. T. & T.'s Hungarian subsidiary was an undercover, sabotaging organization, like all other American companies in eastern Europe, is an obvious fiction. It is, however, a testimonial to the inventive fertility of the agents of the Hungarian government and the inflexibility of their resolve to rid the country of all Americans whose presence might be embarrassing because of their knowledge of internal conditions.

Last December the United States demanded the immediate release of Mr. Vogeler and accused the Hungarian government of ulterior purposes and violation of international law in making the arrest. Evidently Hungary is prepared to take the consequences of her defiant disregard of these official protests, and there is little if anything that can be done to secure redress so long as Hungary is subject to a dictatorship that has no respect for the rules of international conduct observed by the civilized nations of the Western World, and no regard for the rights of individuals, either natives or foreigners.

We should be false to our own traditions of fair dealing, if we were to resort to reprisals against Hungarians in this country as a means of bringing the Hungarian government to reason. And the severance of diplomatic relations would have no disciplinary effect, since the Budapest regime is committed to practices intended to deprive us of all the advantages of maintaining diplomatic relationships. The most we can hope for is that eventually the people of subject states, like Hungary, will rise in their wrath and depose rulers who rely on terrorism and public ignorance brought about by isolationism to keep them in power.

Prince Georges Ferment

The yen for home rule seems to be infectious in these parts. Some years ago our neighbors in Montgomery County launched a home-rule movement and finally set up a council-manager type of government which appears to be living up to expectations. In the District the home-rule movement is well advanced, and only the obstructionist attitude of the House District Committee seems to stand in the way of its achievement. Now a furor over home rule has arisen in Prince Georges County. At present the most vocal groups appear to be primarily interested in defeating the so-called home-rule bill that State Senator Sothoron has introduced at Annapolis. But behind this is an unmistakable interest in the achievement of better local government through home rule.

Two damaging arguments are being raised against Senator Sothoron's measure. First, it is said to have come as a complete surprise to the people of Prince Georges. Apparently it did not spring from the grass roots but from the minds of public men interested in forestalling more sweeping reforms in the government of the county. That, of course, is a serious defect. To be worthy of the name, a home-rule plan has to be chewed over and digested by civic and political groups; it has to reflect urgent yearnings on the part of a majority of the people for wider participation in local governmental affairs. If it fails in these respects, the reform is likely to be abortive.

The second objection to the Sothoron bill is that it would give only a false facade of home rule. Most of the changes provided for would be permissive rather than mandatory. And the bill would merely patch up, instead of abolishing, the present commissioner system. To be sure, it recognizes the need for continuous supervision of the county's expanded activities and for more responsible policy-making than any legislature meeting biennially can give. Where it falls short is in imposing the supervisory task upon the chairman of the board of commissioners. The result, we suspect, would be a lop-sided policy-making body, because of the great advantage the chairman's full-time position would give him. At the same time proper checks upon the full-time chairman would probably be lacking, because he could not be fired by the policy-making body, as a county manager can.

The League of Women Voters of Prince Georges County has suggested that reorganization of the local government should begin with an expert survey of the county's needs and problems. This makes sense. Such a study would afford a basis for public discussion and for the shaping of proper legislation. It is interesting to note that the home-rule movements in both the District and Montgomery County followed this pattern. Creation of a new government is a very delicate task that calls for the aid of specialists as well as widespread public debate. Apparently the most popular step the Legislature could take at this session would be to launch a study of home rule for Prince Georges.

Following The CIO

At any time during the last several years the Veterans' Administration would have been justified in severing all relations with the United Public Workers because of its tendency to follow the Communist Party line. Instead, it did nothing until the CIO executive board voted to expel the UPW for this reason. Then it suddenly followed the CIO lead. We think the VA is open to criticism for the manner and timing of its announcement. It should have conducted an independent investigation of long-standing charges that the UPW was a Communist-dominated organization and based its decision on the findings without waiting to see what the CIO would do. There is no valid excuse for a timorous follow-the-leader policy that gives rise to a strong suspicion that the VA is more interested in currying favor with the politically powerful CIO than in eliminating Communist influence from unions representing Federal employes.

Aid to Airlines

On February 13 you published a letter from Mr. T. K. Taylor, replying to my letter of February 9. Mr. Taylor states that, "airlines did only 1.6 percent of the total passenger transportation . . . in 1948." My figures, based on millions of passenger-miles operated, show they did 8.1 percent. I am in agreement with his statement of one half of 1 percent of freight business. The figures, however, merely emphasize the importance of the railroad industry to our economy.

I cannot accept Mr. Taylor's remark that the railroad industry blames "everything and everybody but themselves for their troubles and declining revenues," and that we "should quit worrying about the airlines and the assistance they receive." That we are on sound ground in our stand is confirmed by Secretary of Commerce Sawyer, who has stated that "there is considerable justice in the complaint of the railroads that their competitors are placed in a privileged position as the result of governmental promotional policies."

Mr. Taylor states that the "public gave the railroads 185 million acres of public lands." My figures are 130 million acres. It simply is not true, however, to say that the Government "gave" this land to the railroads. The fact of the matter is that, according to a Federal Government fact-finding agency, to the end of May, 1945, the railroads had paid the Government (in the form of land-grant deductions) more than one billion dollars for lands which were worth about one and a quarter million dollars when they were granted. And it should be remembered when we talk of grants and aid to the railroads that of the 200,000 miles of railroad in the United States today, 92 percent received no Federal land-grant aid whatsoever!

Since 1933 the Government has spent 800 million dollars for the construction of airports. In addition we build, operate and maintain an extensive system of radio and radar aids to navigation. This program, from 1947 through 1949, cost the taxpayers approximately 411 million dollars. Mr. Taylor says "the public has received and will receive a good return on its investments in airports and air navigation facilities." But Mr. D. W. Rentzel, Administrator of Civil Aeronautics, is quoted as follows:

". . . Taxpayers of the United States have an investment of about one and one half billion dollars in civil airports. Of the larger airports, which were financed by Federal, State, and local appropriations, only a handful are self-supporting even to the extent of returning out-of-pocket operating and maintenance expenses."

Contraceptive Sales

Before the Maryland Legislature—and by now passed by the House—is a bill thoroughly misleading in its wording. I am referring to HB 45, designed to prohibit sale of "contraceptives via vending machines."

Quoting from the bill, "Whereas vending machines are being placed in rest rooms in service stations . . . for the sale of contraceptive devices and where they are conspicuously brought to the attention of the youth of the State . . ."

Everybody is in favor of anything that will reduce promiscuity among our young people—and such machines assuredly have no place anywhere that teen-agers have easy access. The fact is, however that about 99 percent of such machines are located in taverns and road houses—places where, according to Maryland law, no person under 21 years is permitted, except with his parents. These are places where such machines furnish necessary prophylactic items against venereal disease.

Prophylactics have been sold under the counter by bartenders long before machines appeared on the scene and at three to four times the machine's price, and they will be sold if the machines are outlawed.

Klutz's Involvement

I am surprised that no letters have as yet appeared commenting on Jerry Klutz's column of February 10 confessing all his stamp manipulation with Harold Ambrose of the Postoffice Department.

I have just written down the astounding (astronomical to Government clerks) figures—$6,600, $11,000, $4000—outlays of cash in these transactions. His profit he says came harder than "hoeing I did in Missouri at 10 cents an hour." I suggest he be sent back and sent back fast to Missouri, out of the sight, hearing and presence of the thousands of Government workers whose salaries reach to cover little more than the necessities of living.

Where does one get such sums to invest? Who has friends who at the drop of a hat can and do fork over thousands of dollars? Not Government clerks.

One thing further: paying a Government official 10 percent profit on a deal! Right, neither legally nor morally! Most Government clerks would recognize how wrong such a thing is, even if your columnist apparently naively expects us to believe he didn't because "The postal official assured me repeatedly that there was nothing 'wrong' or even questionable about the proposed sale."

"Integration in Europe"

In your very interesting February 14 editorial, "Integration In Europe: Hoffman's Aim," you disagree with Mr. Leffingwell, who thinks that some protected industries in Europe would collapse in case of free trade. You advanced the idea of uniting the European heavy industry by cartelizing it.

This may solve one half of the problem in harmonizing some conflicting commercial interests of the owners, private or public. Yet the question has another part as well: the British, French and German governments or industrialists may be compelled to change their business organization and to lower their income in order to meet on a certain level. We are definitely unable to coerce French, British or German workers bringing their productivity per head and standard of living, i.e. their wages, to the same level. If you succeeded in "integrating" your industrial machinery in the United States it is not only because there are no borders to cross and no national obstacles to overcome in moving capital and labor, it is also because new factories in California have to deal with exactly the same efficiency offered and about the same wages asked for by engineers and workers in New York.

You are perfectly right in saying that before the war there was a certain degree of integration in Europe, but it was so because the efficiency and the needs of the European workers were integrated too. But how can you integrate British, French and German production if the British and French employes refuse to work as many hours a week and for such a miserable salary as their western German colleagues do?

That is the point. Unfortunately there will be no integration of Europe as long as these conditions are not leveled off by lifting the standard of living in western Germany, or lowering it in England and France, or increasing the efficiency of the British and French workers and reestablishing free competition between their employers.

Friendship For Mao

The Chinese Communists now control practically the entire mainland of China and there is no prospect of dislodging them. This last is the judgment of General Marshall. There are some who think that they might have been held back if we had given more help to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. The fact is that we did give him more help than the Russians ever gave the Communists, and that his invasion of Manchuria was turned back and his troops driven from every province on the mainland. It is said, without justification I think, that we sold Chiang Kai-shek down the river. Even if this were true we must face the fact that we cannot sell him up again.

The Kuomintang has been unable to promote the welfare of the great peasant majority constituting four-fifths of the population, partly through lack of resources and partly through opposition of the landlord class. Competent observers report much effort to avoid conscription, followed by half-hearted fighting and desertion on a large scale. There is much testimony that the peasants feel that the Communists are on the whole more concerned to promote their interests.

There are indications that peasants will be permitted to retain their private holdings and that they will have more opportunity to express their opinions than they had under the Kuomintang. As to freedom of religion, missionary institutions state that they are permitted to conduct religious exercises.

The new government faces a tough job. Its greatest need will be for persons with technical knowledge and administrative ability. These needs the United States can supply much better than Russia can.

There are two great world powers to which the Chinese can turn for aid—Russia and the United States. If the latter indicates only a hostile attitude, it will only drive the Communists to seek aid elsewhere and lead them to regard Russia as their friend and the United States as their enemy. For this reason it seems to me that much of the present policy of the United States is self-defeating.

If the United States wishes to influence outcomes in China and the Far East, it should cease talk and action which indicate hostility and give some evidence that Mao has more to gain from friendship with the United States than from that of Russia.

The above was written just before receipt of news of the 30-year Sino-Russian Agreement, in which secret clauses favorable to Russia are suspected. This pact might not have been concluded if Mao had any hope of friendship and cooperation elsewhere. Denunciation by us will not weaken this pact, but only strengthen it.

Flaws In New Electoral Plan

A Communication

I HEARTILY agree with the purposes of the Lodge-Gossett amendment now before the House. Little need be said on the abolition of personal electors and their replacement by the direct vote of the people for the candidates, measured by electoral units. Nor is much discussion required of the proposal to discard the present mode of electing the President by the House and the Vice President by the Senate in case no candidate secures a majority of the electoral vote. To substitute for this arrangement the plurality system according to which the candidate with the highest number of electoral votes is elected is, in my opinion, a solution in harmony with our general political practice. In view of the fact, however, that objections have been raised on these two comparatively minor points, it seems advisable to satisfy them as much as possible, to reach an agreement to which serious objection is not possible.

The core of the problem, however, lies in the unit vote, and the proposal to replace it by a division of the electoral vote of a State among the various candidates in proportion to the popular vote which they have received. Again, there can be no objection to the goal pursued. The unit rule is an unmitigated abuse.

THE QUESTIONABLE feature of the proportional division of the electoral vote arises on two points. First, there is the question whether a splitting-up of parties would be promoted by this division. Senator Lodge has vigorously emphasized that ultimately there can be no proportional representation where only one candidate is to be elected. He is right, but everything depends upon the reaction of the voter. If the people are more impressed by the fact that they can give an electoral vote to the candidate of a minor party, than by the fact that these electoral votes are unlikely to influence the result, then the success of minor parties will be promoted by the proposed reform.

The second point to be considered is that the Lodge-Gossett amendment is the old Lea amendment, which in its turn is the product of the American movement in favor of proportional representation. There is no doubt, that the entire theory of P. R. has been smuggled into the amendment by the adoption of its terminology. Proponents argue that it is unjust that the candidate who in a particular State secures a plurality of the votes obtains all of its electoral vote, and the others nothing. If this is unjust, then the election of every single member of Congress is unjust, and we ought to introduce proportional representation for congressional elections.

THE OTHER objection to the amendment lies in the point stressed by Mr. Basil Brewer, Senator Ferguson and Senator Taft. The figures submitted make it obvious that on the basis of the past vote the proportional division of the electoral votes of a State gives the Democratic candidate an advantage. It has been calculated by Dr. Ralph Donnelly—who favors the Lodge-Gossett amendment—that in the elections from 1888 to 1944 the Democratic candidate would, in the case of a proportional system carrying the division of the electoral vote to but one decimal point, have secured from 1.40 to 7.05 percentage points more of the electoral vote than of the popular vote.

Thus, in 1892 he would have secured—always assuming that there would have been no change in the distribution of the popular vote—46.12 percent of the popular and 47.52 percent of the electoral vote; in 1924, it would have been 28.89 percent of the popular and 35.97 percent of the electoral vote. Republican losses would have ranged between 0.64 and 5.03 percentage points. In 1888 the Republican candidate would have obtained 47.77 percent of the popular and 47.13 percent of the electoral vote; in 1924, it would have been 54.18 percent of the popular and 49.15 percent of the electoral vote.

Senator Lodge, to be sure, expects a change in the distribution of the popular vote, i. e., an increase of Republican votes in the South to take place which would eliminate this difference. However, extensive Republican gains among the Southerners now voting would alienate the Northern Republican liberals, and gains among Southerners not voting at present would risk antagonizing those who now do vote in that area.

Meanwhile, Congressman Coudert has reintroduced his resolution calling for the determination of presidential elections in individual districts. The election of the President in a manner similar to the election of Congress can be expected to assist in promoting harmony between the two.

I have never been able to understand why the able proponents of the Lodge-Gossett amendment were willing to freeze their admittedly speculative assumptions concerning the future in a constitutional amendment. Why not either word the amendment in such a way as to delegate to Congress the power to determine the mode of presidential elections, or at least provide for a safety valve by permitting Congress to change a particular mode which experience may have proven objectionable?

The Moscow Agreements With China

THERE IS nothing unexpected or sensational, it seems to me, in the published agreements between the USSR and Red China. They register, according to Mr. Acheson's formula, the existing situation of fact between the two governments. They do not however forecast the future of their relations.

Lippmann

Indeed there is some evidence in the documents themselves, notably in the agreements about Port Arthur, Dairen and the Manchurian railroad, that the negotiators operated on a two-year plan—that they regarded the existing situation of fact in the world as likely to change in important respects by 1952. They may well have been thinking of Germany, the race of armaments, the end of the Marshall Plan as well as the outcome of the first phase of Mao's internal reconstruction efforts.

WITHIN this two-year frame, the agreements could hardly have been other than they are. Red China was certain to make a military alliance with her powerful neighbor not only because the USSR is Communist, but also because there was no alternative open to Red China. The American position is hostile, and with Chiang's continued bombing of Chinese cities we are involved in an indirect and undeclared war against Red China. The alliance would undoubtedly have been signed anyway. But whether it is to be implemented seriously by China will almost certainly depend on whether in the coming years the tension between China and the rest of the world is augmented or relaxed.

The fact that the Russians have promised to leave Port Arthur and Dairen by 1952 suggests that they believe tension will become relaxed in the Far East. In their calculation that could mean only that they have reasonable confidence that American military power in the Far East will recede from the mainland of Asia.

THE SOVIET promise to withdraw from Manchuria does not take effect until 1952. But the military alliance is in effect at once and so too, it seems, is the agreement to provide economic aid at the rate of 60 million dollars a year for five years.

This is a small amount, measured not only by American aid to the Nationalists but also by Soviet aid to a European satellite like Poland. The figure probably reflects both the limited capacity of Russia to export capital and the limited capacity of China's primitive economy to absorb capital during the first phase of recovery and reconstruction from the prolonged international and civil wars.

But there is reason to suppose that Mao has been told that more capital may be forthcoming. For it is known that the USSR is talking with the German industrialists about the Chinese market. Neither the Russians, the Chinese or the Germans will have forgotten the part that Germany played before the Second World War in projects for Chinese railway and air development.

It stands to reason that the more rigorous the embargo on trade between the Red orbit and the Western nations, the more intense will be the effort to develop trade from Germany through Russia to China.

THERE IS nothing in these agreements which suggests that Secretary Acheson was mistaken when he pointed out that there are great conflicts of interest along the northern borderland between China and the USSR. Naturally these conflicts are not advertised at this time. Obviously it was the interest of Stalin and of Mao not to press the issues at this time, especially after Mr. Acheson's speech. For however much the Russians and the Chinese may disagree about their spheres of influence inside Asia, they were not likely to give Mr. Acheson the satisfaction of quarreling now.

Anyone who expected or hoped that Stalin would treat Mao as, let us say, Hitler used to treat Benes or Schuschnigg is underestimating Stalin's common sense, and anyone who interprets the cordial atmosphere in which the negotiations ended in Moscow as meaning that the deep issues have all been resolved is like the amateur gardener who digs up the seeds he planted to see whether they have sprouted.

THEY ARE NOT likely to sprout as long as Red China is isolated and menaced by the threat of direct or indirect intervention. Mao must necessarily be concerned primarily with the security and with the consolidation of his new regime. The outlying provinces, apart from Manchuria which is of vital importance to Chinese reconstruction, cannot be his main concern as long as he feels himself surrounded by hostile powers. He is bound to repeat the history of the Soviet revolution 30 years ago when, surrounded and threatened, it abandoned temporarily the outlying interests and ambitions of the old Russian empire in the Far East and in the Middle East.

Nothing, therefore, is so favorable to Chinese appeasement of Soviet imperialism as the policy—forced upon Mr. Acheson against his better judgment by the Chiang Republicans in Congress—of isolating, ostracizing, embargoing and threatening Mao's regime. For while all that will not overthrow Mao, it will lock him up in the iron grasp of his only ally.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Johnson And The Chiefs

The hardest question to answer about Louis A. Johnson's concealed disarmament program is why the Joint Chiefs of Staff have stood for it so long. The answer would seem to fall into several parts. The first part is the new atmosphere of blended favoritism that now pervades the Defense Department.

A pretty good symbol of the favoritism is to be found in the Secretary of Defense's outer office. Brig. Gen. Louis Renfrow, a plump relic of Johnson's American Legion machine, now presides there as his patron's special assistant. For a far from brilliant reserve officer serving as Johnson's appointments secretary, Renfrow has received remarkably high promotion. But that is not all. He was once a dentist. He is also drawing $100 a month supplementary pay under a rule designed to attract young dentists into the services.

The sum is not large. The arrangement is at least technically legal. But the symbol remains: the crony gets his perquisites while Johnson's "economies" bite deep into the sinew of American strength.

As for the intimidation, there is plenty of evidence concerning the Secretary of Defense's special methods of getting his way. One authenticated incident involved one of the two or three ablest senior officers in the Army, whose unpopularity with Johnson may probably be traced to his serious approach to defense problems.

Mere threats would of course not frighten the Joint Chiefs themselves. Yet it must be remembered that Bradley and Collins, Vandenberg and Sherman were all trained in an earlier period, as members of the defense services of a country that had no defense.

This prewar psychology has quite visibly survived, for example, in Gen. J. Lawton Collins, who is fond of repeating that his ground forces are in better shape than ever. It is true, and has been recorded in this space, that the Army alone has maintained its fighting units under the impact of Johnsonian "economy." It is also true that these fighting units are in a fine state of training.

At least in his public statements, this seems to satisfy General Collins, yet he is making do with Second World War weapons which are in many cases obsolescent or actually obsolete. He has no tank force worth speaking of. He has in prospect only the smallest trickle of the new anti-tank weapons. Above all, because of Air Force "economies," he cannot count on the slightest effective close air support, without which modern armies literally cannot take the field.

Finally, the Joint Chiefs must be well aware that in this matter of defense "economy," the Secretary of Defense only differs from the President in wishing to go further and faster. The President made the original decision, in 1948, to forget the requirements of a serious defense, and to sacrifice defense planning to budgetary convenience.

Meanwhile, however, Soviet strength has grown visibly, and the world situation has worsened appallingly. Meanwhile, the defense planning of the Atlantic Pact nations, which is under the personal charge of the incorruptible General Omar Bradley, has begun to show how enormous are the gaps in our security. Meanwhile, Congress has been waking up, as is shown by Senator Millard Tydings' fine speech last week.

Thus far, Secretary Johnson has been able to count upon the Joint Chiefs' acquiesence, and to take advantage of it. But that acquiescence may not endure forever.

Meet Woody Martin—Another Do-it-Yourself American!

Men like Woodford L. Martin live on every Main Street. For you'll find folks all over the country who also believe America still has new frontiers . . . and prove it by making their own security. How does this "Do-It-Yourself Spirit" pay off? You'll find one answer in the story of this former Savannah, Missouri, highway worker . . .

He built a business by putting new life in old land!

★ At 33, he heads his own firm

When Woody Martin got back from the war, he saw the farms around his home county with new eyes. "It was dying land," he recalls. "Everywhere you'd see washouts, gullies, hillsides bare of topsoil." Acre by acre, water run-offs were ruining the land!

Martin talked over the problem with expert soil conservation men. They told him what the State already was doing about it. Then he had an idea! Why not make a business of putting new life in the land?

From small beginnings with one war-surplus tractor, Martin today at 33 heads a business that's well on the way to big success. For Martin saw an opportunity and had the energy and ambition to do something about it.

Woody Martin's "Do-It-Yourself Spirit" is shared by lots of other people in many other ways. For example, the 80 million Americans—4 out of 5 families who voluntarily use life insurance to take care of their own futures. And their number is growing every day.

So the life insurance business is making more benefits available to more people. It brings weekly and monthly-payment policies to folks of modest means; family income replacement plans to others. And group life insurance to millions of employees. Today there are 584 individual, competing companies and 150,000 trained agents . . . helping Americans to help themselves.

Life Insurance is an open book...

It's a fact that the money you pay for life insurance "goes back to Main Street" twice . . .

- First, it goes back to work on Main Street as investment money. It helps build and expand plants, build water works, extend power lines. It also helps finance homes, and schools, improve farms. It makes jobs in many ways.
- These insurance investments are spread throughout the country. You will find them on farms, in small towns as well as in large cities, roughly in proportion to life insurance ownership.
- Second, life insurance money goes back to Main Street when paid to policyholders and beneficiaries. Then it helps keep families a going concern, keeps children in school, gives older folks secure retirement years.

To make sure you are getting the greatest benefit from your own life insurance, see your agent. Life insurance is a service! Your agent is trained to help you make the most of it. The Institute of Life Insurance—central source of information—60 East 42nd Street, New York 17, N. Y.

Washington Pays Over-Average Milk Prices Although in Midst of Highly Productive Area

Government figures show that milk prices in Washington are higher than the average for American cities, although it is in the midst of a highly productive milk area.

Most of the benefit of the higher prices goes to the dairy farmers, reports just released indicate.

Farmers in this milkshed have been getting $6.44 a hundred pounds for their fluid milk since last August, compared with an average of $4.35 for the same grade of milk in 125 of the Nation's chief markets. (The Bureau of Agricultural Economics figures show the Maryland-Virginia milk producers get $6.44 per 100 pounds for milk of 4 percent butterfat; the average for the country is $4 for milk of 3½ percent butterfat.)

In only four cities are farmers paid a higher price for their fluid milk than in the Washington area. These are all distant from their milk sources. The cost of transportation more than makes up the difference. These are Miami, $7.21; El Paso, $6.50; Galveston and Houston, $6.80 each. Both Jacksonville and Savannah pay more, but both require higher testing milk, which more than makes up the difference.

On the other hand, cities with nearby milksheds like Washington, pay far less. Such cities are Chicago $3.76; Baltimore $6; Boston $5.51; Detroit $4.20, and so forth.

The retail milk price in Washington is three-quarters of a cent to 1½ cents a quart above the average for the Nation's largest 25 cities.

The home-delivered price here of 21½ cents a quart is exceeded in 17 of the country's 125 leading markets. They are Miami, 26 cents; Jacksonville, 25; Savannah, 24; Birmingham, Atlanta, Mobile, New Orleans, El Paso and Houston, 23 cents; Newark, Plainfield, Buffalo, Rochester, Durham, Winston-Salem, Greenville, S. C., and Richmond, 22 cents.

The trend of milk prices has been downward recently, BAE reported. A drop in prices usually comes at this season.

The average retail price for milk, BAE said, delivered to homes in 24 cities early in February was 20 cents a quart. In Washington the price ranged, the same report said, from 20 to 21½ cents a quart. Most dairies charge the latter figure.

Baltimore prices went down 1 cent a quart on February 13. Detroit dropped ½ cent a quart. The minimum retail price in Pittsburgh dropped 2 cents a quart February 16, and farm prices were reduced in several areas, including Philadelphia, Erie, Pa., etc.

Plans Are Completed For Gordion Expedition

Philadelphia, Feb. 19 (U.P.).—The University of Pennsylvania Museum has completed plans for an archaeological expedition this spring to the former Turkish city of Gordion, where Alexander the Great is said to have cut the Gordian knot with his sword.

Gordion, about 65 miles from Ankara, was the capital of the Kingdom of Phrygia more than 2500 years ago.

Dr. Froelich G. Rainey, director of the museum, said today the expedition will search for objects and material which may lead to the translation of the Phrygian language and reveal more about the culture of the earlier Phrygians.

Rent Increases Recommended For 136 Northwest Apartments

A boost of 7.04 percent was recommended on 60 apartments at 1321 and 1329 Belmont st. nw. Proposed rents are $29.50 a month for two rooms and bath to $46 for three rooms and bath. Present rents range from $27.50 to $42.50.

Hearing May Decide Rent Control Future

To Printers

Arbitration Proposed by Publishers

Washington newspaper printers, who have asked their international union for authority to take a strike vote against the four daily newspapers, yesterday received an arbitration offer from the publishers.

The printers whose negotiations with the publishers are deadlocked, took no action on the offer pending the expected arrival of an international union representative here.

James J. O'Connor, president of the local, Columbia Typographical Union No. 101, termed the arbitration proposal a "normal maneuver to get their case in a favorable light with the public."

The arbitration proposal was read to the printers at yesterday's union meeting, held at Pythian Temple, and will be referred to the international representative, expected this week.

Peyton R. Evans, executive secretary of the Publishers Association, said the letter to O'Connor proposed, in the event that no agreement is reached through negotiations, that publisher and union representatives frame the issues involved so they might be submitted to arbitration.

Will the Federal rent-control law be continued after June 30?

The International Association of Machinists already has warned Congress that dropping Federal rent controls will mean increased wage demands. Other labor unions no doubt will follow suit.

The machinists complain that they have been "unable to get any clear picture of the intentions of this Congress."

There is wide sentiment in both houses among both Administration Democrats and Republicans for dropping Federal controls as of June 30.

But as one Administration stalwart put it, "On the question of rent controls, perhaps more than on any other issue before the Congress, the hearings will tell the story."

Hearings will start in April. Both House and Senate members of the Banking and Currency Committee which will handle the question indicate they will really be sitting as a jury to obtain any evidence of need for continuation of the legislation.

Some indication of how Congress may swing will be found in hearings next month on a deficiency appropriation for the office of Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods.

But most important of all will be any action on rent controls taken by the industrialized States of New York, Illinois and Connecticut.

Many members of Congress feel rent controls should be continued in the District of Columbia.

Montgomery Players Have Hit

Governmental Ways Spoofed In Comedy, 'Two Blind Mice'

If your cold war nerves aren't too frazzled you may be interested in a story about Herbological warfare. Strategic offices of the ISSOMHSC (and if you don't know what that stands for, don't worry) are located at Leland Junior High School, and 17 Montgomery players are there to give you top secret information.

Samuel Spewack's "Two Blind Mice," a delightful comedy about Government red-white-and-blue tape, ridicules everything from top brass in the Army, Navy, Air Corps and State Department, to low brass in the tailoring business. It will be repeated tonight and tomorrow night at Leland. Reservations at Wisconsin 4685.

Two middle-aged women, defying all the rules of postwar demobilization, liquidation and general disintegration, continue to operate an herb agency illegally. A wiggle-hipped rumba teacher, a Girl Scout troop, a tailor, a 50c parking lot, and a young married couple also occupy the premises, but their connection with Herbological warfare is strictly for the rent they bring in.

It seems that the late husband of one brewed herbs during the war. Just why is not clear, but it doesn't matter. After the war the offices of the ISSOMHSC were supposed to have been liquidated, but due to botchy handling somewhere along the line, the two were never officially notified.

Carrying on for husband, country and so forth, the two women happily brew herbs with fantastic names, refuse to answer the phone, burn the incoming Government checks until a reporter interrupts their activities. With the promise that he will restore them legally to their old position of importance, he proceeds to embroil everyone in a complicated and hilarious situation.

It's daffy, but it makes you laugh. A good part of the fun is supplied by Marshall Smith, who plays Tommy Thurston, former reporter, adventurer, practical joker, wit and optimist. Smith injects at least a dozen waggish implications into every line, which keeps your sense of humor busy.

Running a close second is William Vance, blustering through the role of Wilbur Threadwaite. He draws an expert character study of a pompous State Department official who charms his listeners with a great number of vagueries.

Frances Glasheen, as the sophisticated former wife of Thurston, is charming and poised. Faced with the task of trying to attract a little attention away from Smith, she manages to hold several scenes well.

Rita Lowe and Mary McManaway are delightful as the two delinquent herbologists. Outlandishly feminine, they succeed in maintaining a genteel independence both humorous and slightly pathetic.

Many in the supporting cast contribute more than just background. The movement of the play clips along, particularly in the second act, due to good directing on the part of Mary Heinemann, and quick cuing on the part of the cast. ROBIN DORR.

Ballet Russe Gives Second Performance

By Richard Keith

The Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, accompanied by the National Symphony Orchestra, gave the second of its series of three performances yesterday in Constitution Hall.

They presented two of their old tried and true ballets, "Les Sylphides" and "Gaite Parisienne," and a new one for Washington, called "Birthday."

Although "Les Sylphides" is certainly one of the great classic ballets from the standpoint of form and graceful detail, it, as well as "Gaite Parisienne" for that matter, has been so overworked, that one is hardly able to get up much interest in the dance itself. About all that is left to occupy attention is the technical performance of the dancers.

Last night's performance was a good standard one. The corps did its best in Sylphides. Ruthanna Boris was graceful and was well supported by Leon Danielian.

The new ballet, "Birthday," is based on music by Rossini. The music is the liveliest aspect of this sweetness-and-light affair. It starts out with a sprightly and remarkably agile lady who bemoans the arrival of her fiftieth birthday. After a 60-second blackout, we see her at sweet sixteen. She has a party, with much dancing by all, and after another blackout, is consoled by her gray-headed husband. At this point they are apparently too tired to dance, so they just gaze fondly at each other as the curtains slowly close.

The choreography gets really spirited and interesting toward the end of the second scene, but for the most part is just more of the old routine. Mary Ellen Moylan and Oleg Tupine were fine as the Lady and her escort. The corps was a little shaky throughout.

Danilova and Franklin danced only in Gaite Parisienne, which closed the program.

Jewish Music Festival Scheduled Wednesday

The Washington Jewish Community Center will hold its fourth annual Jewish Music Festival Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. in its Cafritz Auditorium, 1529 16th st. nw.

The concert will culminate a series of events in honor of the center's twenty-fourth anniversary, Edward Rosenbaum, executive director of the center, said yesterday.

One on the Aisle—

Do These Things Happen to You?

By Richard L. Coe

WHO D'YE THINK YOU ARE? Ever get names, faces, facts fogged? Here are some ways to do it:

Few weeks ago in 5th ave.'s Plaza Hotel, I was almost tackled, beat up, blackened by burly Forrest Tucker, who's licked a lot of heroes in some 54 movies.

Tuck didn't think I'd done justice to the story angle of "Sands of Iwo Jima," in which he played the disgruntled prize fighter. And he also thought that the Westerns don's get proper attention from the reviewers. The Washington stalwart who worked his way up from the Marines to Hollywood celebrity is not the sort to tangle with at two ayem, so I mollified him by asking when he was going to do a week of summer stock at Olney.

We got along fine then, and Tuck tucked me under his arm for a nice stroll in the rain. I told him the private phone number of Olney's general manager in New York, Dick Skinner, and we toyed with the notion of getting a good leading lady for him.

Tuck was in town the other day, feted by Designer John Greer on his way back to Hollywood and a hero's role. I asked him how he got along with Skinner.

"What a bust that was, kid," Tuck told me. "I phoned him, told him my name and that you had passed me along to him."

"What did you say your name was?" asked Skinner.

Tucker, who gets solid billing everywhere, told him.

"Hmmmmm," Skinner hmmmming, "and what is it you do, Mr. Tucker?"

PEGGY ST. LEWIS tells how she saw a familiar face one day and somehow connected it up with her old friend Don Wilson, at whose wedding she'd been a bridesmaid. Sooo, she approached the familiar face, said hello and cagily admitted she wasn't sure who he was but that she'd met him somewhere. The man smiled. "My name is Jack Benny."

THEN THERE'S the GI who told me the other evening of a Jack Benny performance at the Nurenberg Stadium on a USO tour. Martha Tilton, dressed to the hilt and made up gudgus, practically ran away with the show and in an effort to get a better seat in that huge stadium where Hitler used to boil, our hero ducked out and got way down front. By then a lovely looking gal, sans makeup, false eyelashes and spangles, was holding forth. She read scenes from Shaw's "St. Joan" and the huge crowd was stark silent, roaring for more when the lady finished. Not till then did he know the entertainer was Ingrid Bergman.

ONE WINTER, indolently watching a tennis match in Nassau, I was particularly irked by the lady in front of me, whose huge, floppy hat consistently got in my way. I'd had a tough day anyway, missed seeing Greta Garbo and Dr. Hauser, though I'd peeled eyes for them all morning, knowing they were around and thinking how nice it would be to have an exclusive with Garbo. The hat in front of me made the day seem all the more futile. Finally it got up and left and I began to enjoy the game. Then someone asked me if——. YUP, she was under the hat.

AND SURELY you recall the one Alec Woollcott used to tell, about being on a train and joining a familiar-looking lady in the dining car. He couldn't figure out who she was. Finally, during coffee, she mentioned something about her brother. Alec knew an angle when he saw one; what, he asked, was her brother doing these days. "He is still," clipped the lady, "the President of the United States."

BROTHERHOOD WEEK begins today, as you'll find at all your theaters. Several special events are listed for the week, with one this morning teeing off. This is a film, "One God," depicting forms of worship of the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths, which will be shown this morning at 10:30 in the Labor Department's Departmental Auditorium. Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin will preside at the meeting. Tonight Representative Emanuel Celler will be moderator for a film discussion at 8 o'clock in the John Quincy Adams School, 19th and California sts. "Answer fo' Ann" will be the film under discussion. Seats for this and two other seminars may be had from Mrs. Verna D. Linzel, of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, 733 Southern Building, National 6063.

TODAY: Gayety boxoffice opens for seat sale of Susan Peters in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," opening March 6.

TONIGHT: The fifth annual Riverside Roller Revue benefits the Children's Hospital Infantile Paralysis Fund at the Riverside Stadium; a company of 200 local roller skaters presents the musical revue, which will be repeated tomorrow night for the same charity . . . With the National Symphony Orchestra in the pit, the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo tonight completes its three-night stand in Constitution Hall.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE BASEBALL writers' best friend has just been published. It is the American League Red Book for 1950, authored by Earl Hilligan. More the pity it's a limited edition that isn't in the bookstalls, available to a paying public that could gorge itself on ample helpings of the game's lore well-seasoned with current low-down.

It's authored for the convenience, education and intelligence of the press box inmates, but it isn't written rigidly for the trade. Hilligan has all the answers for the genus fan—who managed the Yankees before Miller Huggins; what percentage of Ted Williams' hit go for extra bases; why the Nats are high on Rookie Outfielder Irv Noren.

POVICH

You can pick the thing up and go on a tear, a veritable baseball binge. Like learning, for example, that the toughest guy in the league to double-up on ground balls was Dick Kokos, of the Browns, who hit into only four double plays all last season. And that Aaron Robinson who could hit only .241 for the Tigers in the daytime was the league's leading hitter at night with a .370 average.

And if beating the Yankees is the crux of the Feller vs. Newhouser debate, it's no contest. Newhouser has licked 'em the most often, 29 to 24, and with fewer defeats, 24 to 27.

IF YOU'RE asking what Washington player had the longest consecutive-game batting streak, it was Heinie Manush—33 games in the pennant year of 1933. Sam Rice owns three records with the Washington club—for leading the team in hitting the most seasons, for making the most hits in a single year (227 in 1925), and for striking out the fewest times (9 in 1929.)

Of the 10 season records credited to Washington pitchers, the late Walter Johnson authored six—most games won, most games started, most completed, most innings pitched, most strikeouts, most shutouts. The last-named feat was his real gem. He won 12 games by shut-outs in 1913. Twelve victories in one season by any kind of a score keeps a pitcher in the league nowadays.

Even as an eighth-place outfit last season, the Nats did achieve one distinction in 1949, Hilligan points out. The only two players who could negotiate the tough trick of hitting a home run in each of the American League parks were both members of the Nats—Eddie Robinson and Clyde Vollmer. The distances in Griffith Stadium kept three of the Red Sox, Williams, Stephens and Doerr out of the list.

HAL NEWHOUSER, who over one period beat the Washington club 12 games in a row, isn't the Nats' worst nemesis, we learn. The toughest guy for the Nats to lick has been Bob Feller, who shows a 23-8 record against them for his career. When Washington wangled Mickey Harris from the Red Sox last summer, they got rid of their second-roughest opponent. Harris beat the Nats 11 times in 15 decisions while with Boston.

If the Tigers and Yankees don't see eye-to-eye on Gene Bearden, the Indains' knuckle baller, then no wonder. Bearden has whipped the Tigers in six of the seven games in which they've met since he came into the league. But the Yankees are completely unimpressed with him. They've licked him four times, never lost to him.

The strangest quirk in the career figures of the league's pitchers concerns Steve Gromek, the Cleveland right hander. The Yankees have found him the toughest pitcher in the league to lick, and have dropped 10 decisions to him while winning only 6. And what do you make of the fact that the Nats have found the same guy the easiest to beat. They've conked Gromek 11 times, lost only 6.

THIS'LL SURPRISE ya, too, or it ought to: Since Clark Griffith moved into Washington in 1912, his teams have won 13 more games than they've lost in the last 38 seasons. The Yankees, Detroit and Cleveland are the only clubs to top 'em in over-all victories since Griffith's regime began.

Three teams in the league never have drawn as many as a million customers at home in any single season—the White Sox, A's and the Browns. Washington made it in 1946 with a fourth-place club that drew 1,027,216. In the respective seasons in which all of the clubs attained their peak attendance, only one did it in a pennant-winning year—Cleveland.

The Browns have one exclusive boast, however. All the other clubs were playing double-headers on the days when they set home attendance marks. The Browns did it with a mere single game against the Yankees, drawing 34,625 on October 1, 1944, their pennant-winning year. Wouldn't be caught dead without that Red Book.

George Mikan with 33 points paced the Lakers. Minneapolis led from the start, and after a 46-32 halftime margin breezed to their twenty-third straight home court victory.

Says Shaughnessy Was 'a One-Man Show'

Stydahar Drops Razzle-Dazzle

LOS ANGELES, FEB. 19 (AP).—Last year, the Los Angeles Rams rode to a National Football League divisional title on a dazzling aerial attack, but next semester they're tossing all that on the scrap heap.

The Rams will now stress fundamentals, their new coach, giant Joe Stydahar announced today. The Rams will concentrate on simple bread-and-butter plays. The Rams will feature a running game a la the Chicago Bears and George Halas and Joe Stydahar.

And in the opinion of Clark Shaughnessy, Stydahar's ousted predecessor, the Rams will also finish somewhere in the division cellar or environs.

Shaughnessy was fired yesterday for causing what Club President Dan Reeves called "internal friction" in the organization. The master of intricate T-formation football bade his adieu by remarking:

"I can take any high school team in the country and lick Stydahar's Rams."

"I realize that my only answer to that is to get results," Stydahar replied today.

The 37-year-old Stydahar served three years coaching the Ram line. He is inexperienced as a head mentor.

Understandably, the new coach is quite bewildered over his newly begotten power. "Ten days ago," he said, "I asked Mr. Reeves for my release so I could get a line coaching job with Green Bay. Mr. Shaughnessy ran the Rams like a one man show. He wouldn't let anybody do anything. I didn't learn a thing and I wanted to move . . . But I never dreamed it would end like this."

COACH GETS STIFF-ARMED—David, 2-year-old son of Joe Stydahar, gives his dad a stout stiff-arm right on the nose as the new coach of the Los Angeles Rams and his family pose for photographers. Stydahar was named coach after Clark Shaughnessy was fired

Cook Shatters World Record In Ohio Shoot

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 19. (AP).—Arthur E. Cook of Washington, D. C., youthful Olympic shooting star and former national champion, carried off most of the trophies in the Ohio State gallery rifle tournament here today.

He shattered a world's record in the prone metallic sight event, firing 435 consecutive bullseyes.

Cook, only American shooter to win a gold medal at the 1948 Olympics in England, took four of five matches today and captured the grand aggregate with a score of 1077 out of a possible 1200 to set a record for the 25-five-year-old tournament. Ervin Brehm of Dearborn, Mich., was second with 1064.

Individual match winners included:

Prone metallic sights—Arthur Cook, 300 plus 405 tens.

Offhand metallic sights—Arthur Cook, 188.

Three position metallic sights—Arthur Cook, 292.

Three position any sight—Waldo Seagly of Topeka, Ind., 294.

Off hand any sights—Arthur Cook, 192.

Cleveland Thinks It Will Have Advance Of 1,000,000 Tickets

Cleveland, Feb. 19 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians think they can sell one million advance tickets for the 1950 season—something no major league club ever has done.

So far about 900,000 tickets have been sold, and the baseball pennant race opening is two months away. Nate Dolin, newly appointed chief of stadium operations, said yesterday "it looks as though we should reach a million easily."

G. W. High Defends Title

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 19. (AP). Nearly 200 athletes from 12 high and prep schools will compete in the annual State scholastic indoor championship track meet which gets under way at 1:30 here tomorrow afternoon in the University of Virginia's Memorial gymnasium.

In the Virginia high school league's Group I division, Alexandria's George Washington High School will appear in the title defending role against Washington-Lee, of Arlington; Thomas Jefferson of Richmond; Maury of Norfolk; Woodrow Wilson of Portsmouth; John Marshall of Richmond; Lane of Charlottesville; Newport News and Hampton.

Episcopal High School and Woodberry Forest, the State's private school track powers of long standing, will fight it out mostly between themselves for the prep school championship, since Fork Union will have the only other entries. Episcopal won indoor honors last year and Woodberry reversed the order outdoors.

Individual champions back in action this season are Dean Cooksey, quarter-miler from George Washington; Billy Duke, Fork Union's record-holding pole vaulter, and Bob Mayer, Woodberry miler.

Catholic Boxer Breaks Shoulder

Catholic University's boxing hopes suffered a blow last night when it was learned that Joe Jennings, the Cardinal's 145 pounder, broke his left shoulder for the second time in his bout with Ben Dolphin of Syracuse Friday night.

Jennings, who was held out of the Card's first bouts this year originally broke the shoulder in football last fall. Friday night, Dolphin floored him in the second round and he landed on the shoulder again, breaking it.

7 of 8 Berths Already Won In Conference

Richmond, Va., Feb. 19 (AP).—It's just about tournament pairing time in the Southern Conference basketball race.

Seven of the eight teams which will compete for the league's 1950 championship in the annual Durham dribble derby next month have been determined.

Certain to have a hand in the tournament fireworks are North Carolina State, defending champion for the third straight year; William and Mary, George Washington, North Carolina, South Carolina, Duke and Wake Forest.

Mathematically, Virginia Tech's Gobblers and Clemson's Tigers could finish in a deadlock for the eighth tournament berth. But the Gobblers have the easiest road ahead to the March 2, 3 and 4 classic.

Tech boasts a record of seven conference wins and five defeats. The Gobblers still have two games to play—one tomorrow night with second-place William and Mary and one Saturday night against cellar-dwelling Virginia Military Institute.

Clemson's record is 5-8. The Tigers have lost their last three loop starts. And they still must play Washington and Lee, Virginia Military and Maryland. Clemson must win all three contests and Tech lose both of its remaining tilts to throw the scramble for eighth place into a deadlock.

Alexander Second, Two Strokes Back

Harlingen, Tex., Feb. 19 (AP).—Young Jack Burke, jr. of White Plains, N. Y., another Texan in the golfing firmament, today ripped in with a 6-under-par 65 to win the $10,000 Rio Grande Valley Open by two strokes.

Curley-haired Jack, son of one of Texas' famed professionals, Jack Burke, sr., eagled the eighteenth hole to better the tournament record for 72 holes and take down the $2000 first place money.

Burke's closing 65 brought him a total of 264, two strokes under the record set in 1941 by Henry Picard.

Coming in with the last threesome, Burke grinned broadly at the jammed gallery (an estimated 5000) around the final green as he sank a 2-footer for his eagle on the par 5, 500-yard hole.

Big Skip Alexander of Knoxville, Tenn., shot a 66 on his final round to finish second with 266.

Tied for third were Henry Ransom of St. Andrews, Ill, who equaled the competitive course record with a 63, and Fred Haas of New Orleans. Both had 267.

Haas shot a 67 today.

The wind-swept, dusty Harlingen municipal course that covers 6095 yards, was given a terrific battering in the final round.

Burke won $2000 first money here, bringing his total for the year to $4940.

The 27-year-old Houston, Tex., native never before had won a major tournament, but he tied for first in the Bing Crosby Invitational this year. His earnings there, however, are not counted in the official PGA money winnings.

Alexander drew $1400 for second place, breaking a long drouth.

Ransom, whose 63 tied the competitive course record set by Lloyd Mangrum in 1948 and tied last year by Dave Douglas, Glenn Teal and Cary Middlecoff—and also equaled today by Max Evans of Detroit—and Haas received $900 apiece.

Burke got two eagles on his last round; one was on the par 5 No. 3 where he used a four-iron to lay up 8 feet away from 165 yards out, and the other—on No. 18—was with a driver and for 260 yards.

He had trouble on only one hole—No. 17—where he three-putted for a one over par 4.

Middlecoff, the defending champion, closed out with a 66 today but finished in a tie for eighteenth at 273.

Coolidge handed Tech's Trainers their only Interhigh loss, 41-36, with Colt guard Donny Eslin running wild for 16 points, his best performance during the regular season.

Coolidge newcomer, Jim Gradijan, who tied the Interhigh scoring record with 26 points Saturday will also be rearing to go.

The Trainers' one-two scoring punch, Tony Sgro and Bill Breen, are set to cause the Colts trouble. Sgro and Breen wound up the regular season in seventh and eighth places in the individual scoring parade with 11.3 and 11 point averages.

In the second game, Western will be out to avenge a 46-37 loss to the Chamberlain Volts. The Volts sprang the season's major upset of the year when they stopped the Red Raiders and gained their first win over an Interhigh foe other than Bell.

Little Tony Magnotto and Joe Kolley turned in superb performances for Chamberlain the last time the two met, scoring 18 and 17 points, while Monty Henninger and Jack Ferrari completely dominated the blackboards.

The only bright light for Western was Hal Weintraub, who had 16 points, his best performance, as he was rolling to the No. 9 spot among the individual scorers.

Dynamite Fights Lemons

Cooper Faces George Sanchez In Turner's Feature Tonight

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez offers his three top featherweight atractions on the same card tonight at Turner's Arena when District featherweight champ, Jimmy Cooper, takes on Cuba's George Sanchez in the 10-round main event.

Little Dynamite, winner of 17 of 18 bouts since turning pro, meets Johnny Lemons in an 8-rounder and Gene Smith, the latest local sensation with five straight wins, goes against Nick Romanelli of Philadelphia in a 6-rounder.

In the headliner, Sanchez will be shooting for an upset over Cooper, who has lost only once in the past year and who gained a decision over worlds bantamweight king, Manuel Ortiz.

Cooper will embark on an Eastern tour in the near future which will be highlighted by a match with the winner of Friday's bout between Bobby Bell and Luis Galvani in St. Nick's Arena, and can't afford to have the blemish of a loss on his record.

In the Dynamite-Lemons bout, Dynamite will rule a strong favorite because of his infighting ability.

It was Lemons who dropped a close decision to Gene Smith here several weeks ago. Lemons came back strong after being on the floor in the opening round and kept Smith off balance and confused for the rest of the bout.

Smith, meanwhile, will be shooting for his sixth straight and attempting to wipe out the memory of the Lemons fight when he couldn't fathom the Philadelphian's fast jabbing style.

In four round preliminaries, Baltimore's Bobby Busick takes on Bobby Rupard in a rematch and Billy Hickerson meets Arthur Harris.

Booster Club Dunned

Nevada's Football Plans Snagged by $45,000 Deficit

Reno, Nev., Feb. 19 (AP).—Little University of Nevada's big-time football aspirations were snagged today on a $45,000 deficit in the athletic scholarship fund.

This came to light when the university board of regents asked the Downtown Boosters Club what it intends to do about that amount the club owes the university for tuition, feeding and housing athletic students.

Here's the set up, the Downtown Boosters—Reno businessmen—gives a $1000 scholarship to a promising athlete. About 40 such scholarships are in effect during football season.

But the club had reported inability to raise enough money to pay for the scholarships. The university agreed to foot the bill for housing and feeding until the funds could be raised. The bill now is $45,000.

Today the regents demanded the Boosters Club pay $10,000 on the $45,000 bill by April 15 and another $24,000 over a 10-year period. They said the remaining $11,000 would be considered at the April session.

George Southworth, jr., president of the Boosters, told the regents bluntly "the cost of athletes is going up.

"In order to get anybody to play, we have to pay them well," he added.

"The University of San Francisco and St. Mary's give five times as much in scholarships as Nevada does," said Harry Frost, chairman of the university board of athletic control.

Phil Fox Has Plan to Curb Basketball Fouls: Award 2 Tosses for Every Violation After 15

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

PHIL FOX, who sees 200 basketball games a season officiating pro, college and high school contests and coaching Wilson Teachers between whistle toots, has a suggestion he thinks will curb the number of fouls . . . He recommends the rules committee limit each team to 15 personal fouls and after that award two free throws for each violation . . . "In that way," he explains, "you won't see as many players deliberately fouling trying to break up a freeze when their team is trailing. The foul could cost them two points instead of just one, as is the case most of the time under present rules" . . . If Fox's suggestion were to be put into effect, his own Wilson team would probably be one of the heaviest penalized teams in the District for the Teachers use an all-court press throughout the game . . . Knocky Thomas, Touchdown Club major domo, berates our Walter Haight for his recent article on Stanton Juniors football team of years gone by . . . "Haight failed to mention the best player on the team—Knocky Thomas," complains Knocky Thomas . . .

ALTHOUGH HIS $125,000 a season job with the Boston Red Sox doesn't begin until April 18, Ted Williams isn't finding it hard to make ends meet in the meanwhile. He gets $5000 per week for his flycasting exhibitions at Sportsmen's Shows and he's a crackerjack flycaster. . . Scratch the name of Center Bill Everson from the Maryland football roster. The Pittsburgh linebacker, out last year with a collarbone injury, has been ruled scholasticaly ineligible . . . Dickie Lewis, former W-L High star halfback, blossoms out as the first-string quarterback in the "Y" formation William and Mary is tinkering with . . . The "Y" is the offense S. M. U. employs and is merely a first cousin of the "T" formation . . . In a recent poll at North Carolina University, only one student out of 14 thought the Tar Heels should de-emphasize football . . . "Big time football makes for a good college spirit," was the consensus of those in favor of the status quo . . . End Jim Peebles and Center Clyde Earhart won't be with the 1950 Redskins. Peebles is now in the athletic department at Riverside Military Academy in Gainesville, Ga., while Earhart has been given his outright release . . .

St. John's Beats DeMatha, 51-34; 7th League Win

Bill Bennings . . .

Dear Folks: Your Host won the Santa Anita Derby, despite stumbling at the start. All the West Coast chalk players were happy. I hate to think what would have happened if the colt had failed. I can picture the bodies four deep at the base of the Suicide Bridge. That almost was the case when Seabiscuit was beaten by Stagehand in the Santa Anita Handicap some years back. The Los Angeles-Hollywood crowd was so sure Seabiscuit outclassed the opposition that a victory ball was arranged for the night of the race and the big hall was decorated in C. S. Howard's colors. When Stagehand won, only a slim crowd gathered for the dance and the thing was a flop-peroo of the first water. I was one of the few who applauded loudly when Stagehand's trainer, Earl Sande, stepped up for the trophy. Only 12 more days to Charles Town.—Bill

The Cadets won their seventh straight in league competition by thumping DeMatha, 51-34, and Gonzaga defeated Georgetown Prep, 47-43.

Bob MacDonald scored 16 of his 19 points to pace the Cadets to a 32-18 advantage at intermission.

American U. Plays Jackets

Randolph-Macon, trying to clinch a Mason-Dixon Conference playoff berth, invades American University tonight for a game with the league's second-place Eagles.

Five of the eight playoff slots already have been clinched by Loyola—the defending champion with 10 victories and one defeat in conference play — American (9-1), Bridgewater (9-3), Washington College (11-4), and Hampden-Sydney (8-4).

Towson (8-7), Randolph-Macon (6-6) and Roanoke (5-5) are in the select circle at the moment but must withstand any late surge which might come from the current ninth and tenth place teams, Baltimore University (6-8) and Mount St. Mary's (6-9).

Holy Cross, Ohio State Clinch NCAA Berths

By Ralph Roden

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—College basketball's post-season tournament picture still is somewhat clouded today with only Holy Cross and Ohio State virtually assured of participation.

The Crusaders (22-0), only major unbeaten team in the Nation and the No. 1 team in the Associated Press poll, are first in line for the District 1 berth in the NCAA tourney. The Crusaders were under consideration for the 12-team National Invitation Tournament in Madison Square Garden but announced they would not accept a NIT bid but would take the NCAA bid.

Ohio State is running away with the Big Ten race and the winner of that battle usually is selected to represent District 4 in the NCAA extravaganza.

The following teams are among the candidates for the National Invitation, Duquesne (20-1), Kentucky (20-4), St. John's (20-3), Bradley (23-3), St. Louis (15-5), Toledo (20-4), Western Kentucky (22-4), North Carolina State (20-4), U. C. L. A. (19-4), Canisius (16-5), CCNY (14-4), LaSalle (16-3), Kansas State (15-5), LIU (17-3) and Niagara (16-6), and San Francisco (15-6), last year's invitation winner.

LaSalle, St. John's, Duquesne and CCNY also are in the running along with Syracuse, Villanova and Columbia for the District 2 bid in the NCAA tournament. Duquesne and St. John's appear to have the inside track.

Kentucky, defending NCAA champs and North Carolina State are the chief contenders for the NCAA's District 3 berth. The Wildcats are a close second in the Southeastern Conference race while the Wolf Pack enjoys a slight edge in the Southern Conference.

Bradley and St. Louis in the Missouri Valley Conference and Kansas State and Nebraska in the Big Seven are the candidates for the District 5 slot. District 6 finds Arkansas of the Southwest Conference and Arizona of the Border in contention at the moment.

Wyoming stands a good chance of landing the District 7 nomination. The District 8 berth usually goes to the winner of the Pacific Coast Conference champion. At the moment Washington State is ahead in the northern division and UCLA in front in the southern.

Authority for Loyalty Dismissals Sought by Commerce Department

The Commerce Department is seeking the authority to fire summarily any of its employes on either loyalty or security risk charges.

It has requested Budget Bureau to include this in the proposed bill to give military and other sensitive agencies sweeping powers over their employes on a permanent basis. Spot firings could be made and the employes involved wouldn't need to be given hearings unless the agencies consent to them. Several other agencies besides Commerce also are reported to be debating whether to seek this additional power from Congress.

The Commerce proposal may be compromised. The Administration is likely to okay summary firings for the National Bureau of Standards and the Coast and Geodetic Survey but the other Commerce employes would be continued under the Civil Service loyalty procedure.

MILITARY: Since the military agencies have fired 130,000 civilians there have been charges that military people have replaced civilians in some of the jobs. As a result, half a dozen bills have been introduced in Congress to forbid uniformed people in civilian jobs.

Officials of both the Army and the Air Force have been asked about the charges. Both denied them emphatically. They explain that cutbacks were made in both military as well as civilian staffs; that the jobs of fired civilians were abolished.

HOLIDAY: Just a reminder—Wednesday is a holiday in Government. Employes required to work on that day will be paid the regular holiday rate.

EXECUTIVES: The Civil Service Commission is making progress in developing tests to fill executive jobs by selecting and promoting persons best suited for the jobs. The Navy program is under way. The commission is now working with the military agencies, Agriculture Department, Federal Communications, and Treasury's Bureau of Accounts on its upper-level tests.

LONGEVITY: Minor amendments will be issued soon by Civil Service to simplify longevity promotions to employes with long and faithful service.

Under the law, an employe must have had at least 10 years of service in his present job, or in an equivalent or higher grade, to be eligible for an above-the-grade increase. The change will redefine "service" in order to count it the same way as the retirement system. That is, all leave without pay in excess of six months in any calendar year will be wiped out.

Another legal provision requires an otherwise eligible employe to have had at least three years of "continuous" service at the maximum rate of his present grade. Under the old rule an employe had to wait a new three-year waiting period if he had a break in service of more than 30 days. This is being changed to provide a break in service of more than four weeks. However, if an employe has leave without pay in excess of six weeks during a three-year period he must make it up by paid service before he can get a longevity boost.

JOB NEWS: About 15,000 young men and women—some 1500 here—will be given the junior scientist and engineer exam next Saturday . . . At the Naval Gun Factory here exams are open for air-conditioning mechanic, $13.76 a day, and electronics mechanic, $10.16 a day . . . A test for engineering aide, $2200 to $3825, is open to fill Federal jobs in nearby States . . . Veterans now hold 59 percent of all Federal jobs filled by men. The number of disabled veterans has reached 132,700 and they make up 15 percent of all employes with preference.

LABOR: This department has directed its bureau chiefs to give vacations and see that their employes take vacations. James E. Dodson, budget director, informed Congress that the order is aimed to (1) see that employes take vacations and return in better physical condition to do their work, and (2) to reduce accumulated annual leave. He said the department would be unable to wipe out all accumulated leave without crippling its work.

Exchange System Carried on With West Point Shows Cadets, Middies and Officers Reach Understanding of Each Others' Problems; Air Force and Marines Included in Program

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Feb. 19.—They can fight the unification battle all over the Pentagon arena—but down here at the Naval Academy the battle is over.

Unification works, both on the midshipmen's level and on the executive level.

This year, for the third time, the Naval Academy and West Point are carrying forward an exchange program between second-year midshipmen and cadets.

The second group of this year's cadets is now at the Academy—and rooming, eating, playing, studying with midshipmen. Up at "The Point," their places are being taken by a similar number of midshipmen, who are learning Point customs.

West Point and Annapolis also have an exchange program on officers in the executive departments. And since 1947, the Navy executive department has had 11 Marine officers.

Air Force There, Too

This year, for the first time, the Air Force has joined in, and three officers in this military arm are now in the executive department at the Academy.

Capt. Carlton R. Adams, USN, explained that all this exchanging is a part of an effort to "maintain a high degree of understanding between the services."

The midshipmen-cadet exchange program was the brain child of Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., Academy superintendent, Adams said, but "it isn't designed as any lark." He pointed out that it does provide an opportunity for the development of friendships between members of the two service arms.

And it gives midshipmen and cadets alike a chance to decide which branch of the service they will elect to join when they are graduated.

This year, Adams said, the Academy expects a graduating class of approximately 695. Of this total, 25 percent will join the Air Force, seven percent will go to the Marine Corps, seven per cent to the Supply Corps, and the rest will become Navy line officers.

Sees No Friction

Major Bethell Everington, jr., Army infantry officer on Academy exchange from West Point this year, said that on the officer level, this unification business works out fine.

"I've never seen any friction—nothing but complete cooperation on everybody's part," he said.

And, he added, midshipmen and cadets are exactly alike when you scratch the surface.

Two Air Force officers, Lieut. Col. John Tyler and Major Robert M. Elrick, spending their first year at the Academy, report "no antagonism" on the part of the midshipmen.

The two officers, both of whom teach mathematics, do have their problems, however.

Air Force uniforms can't keep up with the dozen or more variations allowed under Navy rules, and they must worry over how to conform with these changes with shirt and tie, when "in the yard" at official and social functions.

The two men said they are in a "peculiar position" because they are working almost entirely with civilians since mathematics is "not exactly a military department."

System Praised

Tyler said he was surprised at the amount of freedom the midshipmen get. He said his brother attended the Academy back in the early 1930s and the "jail house atmosphere" reported then has been relaxed.

But it is with the midshipmen and cadets themselves that the effect of the exchange can really be weighed.

Midshipman Richard M. Stanley, who hails from Rocky River, Ohio, is just back from a weekend at the Point, full of comparisons between the way the two schools do things, and convinced that the exchanges do promote individual friendships between midshipmen and cadets.

Sitting in the office of Navy Captain Adams, with Army Maj. Everington standing behind him, Midshipman Stanley was asked to give his opinions on the differences between what the Academy and the Point have to offer.

With perspiration on his forehead, Midshipman Stanley ventured his honest opinion that the Point has more academic freedom than the Academy, but qualified his statement by adding that the type of academic presentation is different.

Good Word for Food

Captain Adams, amused, reassured him: "Say just how do you feel."

Stanley had a good word for the Academy's food, which he said is more plentiful than that at the Point. And there are other differences. West Pointers "straggle" to class; midshipmen march. Classes at the Point are longer than at the Academy, offer more student participation. The slang is not the same for budding Naval and Army officers.

Take now the case of West Point Cadet William Joseph Ryan, from Paducah, Ky., here this weekend on the other end of the exchange.

Food at the Point, he said, is more plentiful than at the Academy. He said also he was "amazed" at the Naval Academy. "I didn't know they were this efficient in operation."

Cadet Ryan was amazed at a lot of things—the fact that midshipmen can take notes and use them on written examinations, while cadets must "rely on what is in our head or on a slide rule."

Surprised by Grace

He was surprised to find that fourth classmen can look upper classmen in the face, and "assume a little equality." At the Point, he explained, it is unthinkable for a fourth classman to look at an upper classman, or even raise his eyes except when spoken to.

Ryan thinks discipline at the Naval Academy is not as strict as at the Point, but he pointed out that this would be proper, since Navy men will live together in close quarters on board ship, while Army officers will be in charge of large groups of enlisted personnel.

Ryan also explained that he was caught off guard a bit by grace before breakfast at the academy. He said at the Point, a grace for the mess is considered an infringement of religious practice for individuals. He added that some of the table commanders at West Point do say grace.

But the whole idea, Ryan said, is a good means "of creating friendship and getting a truer insight into what each service is designed to do."

So down here, when people start talking about "problems" of unification, Academy people can relax.

Presidents Not News at Mayflower

When a reporter arrived to interview him, "Mister Mack" was talking with the President of the United States.

Hilton

This state of affairs was classically characteristic of the Mayflower Hotel, which yesterday had its twenty-fifth anniversary but will really celebrate it Tuesday with a giant reception for Conrad Hilton, hotel magnate and Mayflower owner.

It is, of course, next to impossible to stand in the Mayflower lobby for a quarter of an hour without seeing a Cabinet member or at least a Senator or two. And as for Presidents:

Harry Truman was there four times during Inaugural Week.

Franklin Roosevelt lived there for a week before moving into the White House.

Herbert Hoover, prior to his inauguration, opened office headquarters there to receive callers; later made his home there while working on the Hoover reports.

At just about any time in its history a Government nucleus could be supplied from permanent Mayflower residents.

C. J. Mack, the Mayflower's general manager, probably knows as many of the great as any man in Washington.

Mister Mack's quiet manner cloaks a managerial genius who runs a 20-ring circus and makes each ring think: "You're the only party in the house." He recalled some of the Mayflower's great moments.

Most glittering party, he said, was probably the debut on December 26, 1930, of Helen Doherty, daughter of Henry Doherty. "There were 1500 guests and I believe she gave her attendants Ford cars."

The 218th anniversary of the birth of George Washington will bring an area-wide observance Wednesday.

The day is a legal holiday with schools, colleges, public offices, public libraries, and banks closed, and many retail stores open only a part of the day.

President Truman will be principal speaker at 2:30 p. m., unveiling a new monument of the first President at the National Masonic Memorial at Alexandria.

In the city, a joint anniversary celebration will take place at 10:30 a. m. at the Interior Department auditorium, 18th and C sts. nw. The four groups participating are the Daughters of the American Revolution, Sons of the Revolution, Son of the American Revolution, and Children of the American Revolution.

Principal speaker at this event will be Maj. Gen. Clovis E. Byers, USA, deputy director of personnel and administration of the general staff.

After this observance, members of the District of Columbia Society, Sons of the American Revolution, will hold their annual Washington Birthday luncheon at at the Carlton Hotel. Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley will be the principal speaker.

The Association of Oldest Inhabitants will hold special exercises at the Old Engine House, 19th and H sts, nw., at 11 a. m United States Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.), will be principal speaker, and a patriotic and musical program will be included.

Parishioners of Blessed Sacrament Catholic Church, Alexandria, will begin, at 9:30 a. m , a public demonstration of faith for world peace. A parade will begin at 9:30 a. m., and cover a half mile of Fairlington and Alexandria streets, ending at the church. A mass will follow at 10 a. m.

At 1 p. m. the seventeenth annual Washington's Birthday parade in Alexandria, sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, will begin. It will pass along Washington st., from Montgomery st. to Franklin st. Bands and troop units of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force will be in line.

The Merchants and Manufacturers Association announced yesterday that more than 65 stores, most of them in the downtown area, will close at 1 p. m., Wednesday, while 20 more will close between 1:30 and 3 p. m.

PIN-WORMS MAY BE A FAMILY AFFAIR

Fidgeting, nose-picking and a tormenting rectal itch are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms... ugly parasites that medical experts say infest one out of every three persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

To get rid of Pin-Worms, these pests must not only be killed, but killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do ... and here's how they do it:

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then—Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly and easily.

Don't take chances with this dangerous, highly contagious condition. At the first sign of Pin-Worms, ask your druggist for genuine Jayne's P-W Vermifuge... the small, easy-to-take tablets perfected by famous Dr. D. Jayne & Son, specialists in worm remedies for over 100 years.

Ever See a Dream Talking? In Color, Too!

PEANUT shells on the floor at Turner's Arena make a bumpy path for Patty's old friend, the color camera. So Patty found herself a broom and cleaned up the situation between bouts of the Golden Gloves which CBS color television picked up for special tests

By Sonia Stein

PATRONS at Turner's Arena are accustomed to surprise events, but even this blase crowd did a double take the night they saw a tiny, blond girl of Dresden china fragility seize a room and begin to sweep the peanut-cluttered aisles.

It was Patty Painter, tackling her job for the Columbia Broadcasting System — a job which she defines as "doing whatever has to be done."

In this instance, she was brushing away shells which made a bumpy road for the wheel-based color television camera as it dollied back and forth to pick up the fights. Then, with all the dignity and force 89 pounds of beautiful fluff can muster, she asked the burly spectators to stop throwing shells in the camera's path.

This camera is an old friend of Patty's. It knows her well, since it is as a model for color television that Patty is hired.

Away back in the summer of 1946, when Patty was a very mere slip of 17, she was auditioning as a singer and dancer for a CBS color television demonstration. As it happened, CBS color experts were also looking for a model with nice coloring and a dash of wit and charm to be their permanent performer. They snatched Patty of the silver-blond hair and translucent complexion away from the dance audition and handed her a batch of colored scarves to wave at the camera. She's been waving them ever since.

Calls Her Animated Test Pattern

DR. PETER GOLDMARK, who developed the CBS color system, calls Patty "my animated test pattern." During the past three and half years Patty has been flashing scarves and smiles and making amiable chitchat into the camera as part of the private demonstrations repeatedly given for Government officials, engineers and advertising agency representatives. In these years she has actually become the CBS color trademark, chalking up more airtime than the geometric test pattern.

In Washington, where public demonstrations of CBS color were given during January, and daily since last Monday, Patty has again been on the air more than the test pattern. When these public demonstrations—the first ones anywhere—conclude next Tuesday, it is estimated that more than 15,000 Washingtonians will have seen CBS color—and that means they will have seen Patty.

Patty's performances, seen at 11 a. m. and 1 p. m. daily at the Walker Building, consist largely of flashing scarves, feathers and gloves across the screen, biting into a rosy red apple, tossing a mixed green salad and arranging flowers.

But these glamorous appearances on the screen are the smallest part of Patty's day. She had already had her fill of glamour jobs, having posed her size 4-B feet, her long-fingered hands and her pretty face before commercial photographers for several years. Patty was ready for something more absorbing, and in the color work she's found it.

Appoints Herself Everybody's Helper

BESIDES interviewing celebrities, which she does occasionally on the air, Patty has made herself everybody's self-appointed assistant. Does the director need a pedestal, a marble bust? Patty gets them, although the pedestal may be taller than she is and the marble bust heavier.

Is the camera crew hungry? Patty scurries after coffee and sandwiches, a pint-sized glamour puss on a food run.

When performers are late flying in from New York for one night stands, or are detained on business here, Patty stands in for them at rehearsals—whether it's Singer Kyle McDonnell, Actress Faye Emerson, the Minister from Brazil or a wrestler.

Patty likes to shop for props. "I know it sounds bromidic to say this, but it's like stocking 25 houses of your own with all the most colorful, beautiful things you can find," she explains. Price is no object since the $300 dresses and hundred dollar vases are all on loan.

One of Patty's more appropriate tasks is applying makeup to performers — delicate natural tones such as the color camera delights in. "I don't blame people for being afraid of me when I come at them with a makeup sponge: I look like 'My Friend Irma'," Patty claims. Nobody has been hurt yet, although Patty says she had a nightmare the night before she worked on Senator Margaret Chase Smith. She dreamed of newspaper headlines reading, "Patty Painter Pokes Congresswoman in the Eye."

Hep to What's Good on Video

PATTY types emergency scripts, acts as liaison between the studios and the public viewing room at the Walker Building. Is there a button missing on somebody's shirt? Patty will sew it on. Is a size 12 dress too big for Kyle McDonnell? Patty will take a big tuck in it. Is somebody's dress too plain? Patty will sew sequins on it—and not all in a lump where they'll catch the light badly, either. (Patty's bosses say she's very hep to what will and won't do for television.)

What about arranging flowers for the shows? It's nobody else's job so of course it's Patty's.

One day when Patty was down on hands and knees, picking up a mess of cut flower stems she had made on the studio floor, wearing no lipstick and flaunting a wilted red rose behind her ear Carmen style, Patty was embarrassed to find a magazine photographer watching her.

"You ever seen color television?" he asked. Patty nodded. "You'd look pretty good on it. Ask them to let you stand in front of the camera some time," he advised our Miss Painter—who has spent more hours in front of the color camera than any other living creature.

"Thank you, I will," said Patty politely—which may explain why Patty is the darling, as well as the good luck charm of the CBS color staff.

In spite of Patty's youth and featherweight frame, she speaks with a lovely low voice (her mother majored in speech at the University of West Virginia) and is no feather brain.

Bled for Cause— And Still Bleeds

A TROUPER after all these years, Patty found herself momentarily frazzled during one interview show in which she was serving tea to a guest. Taking a savage knife swipe at a lemon, she nicked her finger. Patty showed her bleeding finger to the floor manager, so he'd keep the camera on the guest until she'd stanched the blood. Instead, he trained it on the wound, reveling in this opportunity to show off a sample of blood. "You can't say I didn't bleed for the cause," says Patty.

Later, the crew teased her. "Some ham, you are. You'd cut yourself to ribbons to steal a scene from your guest," they said.

This joke has grown, until technicians for rival color systems now insist that CBS bleeds alabaster white.

Patty every day to get her so Patty is called "Potsy" by Dr. Goldmark, and to one announcer she is "Miss Potty Pointer"—until a fraction of a second before airtime. To the CBS publicity department she is "Miss Color Television."

But to the CBS color crew, from low man on the totem pole, right to the top, Patty is Girl Friday.

By Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

A SET of pearly teeth biting into a shiny red apple is part of the CBS color television demonstration, with Patty Painter doing the biting. Patty also tosses a salad, arranges flowers, swishes feathers, fans and scarves around for public color demonstrations. The demonstrations, at the Walker Building, conclude tomorrow.

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

IT'S LUNCH TIME—but no time for lunch—so Patty Painter brings sandwiches and coffee back to color television directors Fred Rickey (left) and Lloyd Gross. She's helpful that way

BUTTON, button, who hasn't got a button? Patty will sew one on, between her other self-appointed chores. "It's fun," she says

Nothing Finer, Surely, Than a Carolina Shindig

By Elizabeth Maguire

TO BE from Carolina, nothing could be finer. This was generally agreed at the party given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Davis of Durham, N. C., in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Murphy, also of Durham. The party was a reception held from 5 to 7 p. m. at the Woman's National Democratic Club.

The honor guest, Mr. Murphy, recently succeeded Clark Clifford as Special Counsel to the President.

Mrs. Murphy and the hostess, Mrs. Davis, are cousins.

In the Carolina congressional contingent were Senator Clyde R. Hoey, Senator and Mrs. Frank P. Graham, Representative and Mrs. F. Ertel Carlyle, and Representative and Mrs. Herbert C. Bonner, all from the Tar Heel State.

Tea and cocktails were served and bright yellow spring flowers filled the club rooms. The Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Oscar L. Chapman were there, as well as the Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Gordon Gray, the Assistant to the President and Mrs. John R. Steelman, and the Secretary of the Senate and Mrs. Leslie L. Biffle.

Others included Mr. and Mrs. Donald Dawson, Mr. and Mrs. David Stowe, Gen. and Mrs. Albert Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Porter, Mrs. O. Max Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Shears, Mrs. Julien Friant, Mr. and Mrs. C. McPherson, Mr. and Mrs. John Ralls, Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey Warren, and Mr. and Mrs. Braxton Jones.

Flowers Bloom In the Winter, Tra-la

THE COCKTAIL PARTY given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee Murphy was bright and gay. Spring flowers decorated the rooms of the house as well as feminine hats. Over 100 guests were received between 6 and 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Murphy wore a pretty black taffeta frock with full skirt and low neckline and white orchids pinned at the shoulder.

Among the guests were the Greek Ambassador and Mme. Dendramis, the Spanish Ambassador-at-large and Senora de Lequerica, the Spanish Agricultural Attache and Senora de Echegaray, Mrs. Randall Hagner, Mrs. Henry Flood, and Mrs. Roy St. Lewis, who is expecting her husband home today from Oklahoma.

Others were Mme. Vladimir Rybar, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar L. G. Prochnik, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Strong, Mr. and Mrs. George Boncesco and Mr. and Mrs. Blake Clark.

COL. AND MRS. HUGH BUTLER are planning to pull up stakes and leave Washington for sunny California around April 1. They will sell their apartment on California st. as well as their mountain hideout in the Blue Ridge near the Sky Line Drive.

Going across country by easy stages, they will make a long stop at Mrs. Butler's home in Colorado, after which they will join their daughter Rosemary in Claremont, Calif.

Colonel Butler is retiring from the U. S. Maritime Commission with the completion of 30 years of Federal service. His varied activities include war service in OSS (London); Assistant Commercial Attache to the American Embassy, London, and Commercial Attache to the embassy in Dublin, Eire.

Jobe Says...

You may think that I'm a little hipped on the subject of ensembles! Well, I am enthusiastic about this fashion for it's such a smart spring dress style. Best of all, ensemble dresses are now available again at whatever price suits your own purse—so there is no reason why every woman should not have one this spring.

I think those with a long fitted redingote coat and a printed crepe dress look very new again. If you live in the North, by all means buy one with a wool coat. But they are equally smart with faille or spun rayon coats which can be worn right through into warm weather.

Your Figure, Madame

Start Spring Slimming Today!

By Ida Jean Kain

TAKE a deep breath . . . this is it, a new and exciting approach to slimming. Apply the psychological principles back of this figure-fixing course, and get the habit of a good figure.

Find the stumbling block. You've long wanted to weigh less. Many's the time you've said wistfully, "My, I wish I could get thinner . . . it would be so nice to be able to fit into a size 16 again, but I declare I haven't the will power."

It's not that you haven't tried, either. Time and again you've dieted off three pounds—only to gain back three and a half. Repeated failures have subsconsciously impressed it on your mind that you cannot reduce and that it is useless to try. This disbelief in yourself is keeping you overweight.

Take another deep breath. Do you really mean that you would give anything to be normal weight again? If you mean it enough, and use the right psychological approach, you can make yourself over.

First know what it is you want. It is not merely to get thin . . . it is so much more than that. Actually what you want is to be vitally alive, to have more energy, and to be able to slip smoothly into your proper size dress and walk right out of the store in it.

BUT DEEPER than that, even, is the desire to realize your full potentialities as a woman.

How do you go about tackling the problem from this new angle? Desire is the motivating force. Then you must believe in your own mind that it is possible; otherwise it is simply wishing. Believe and you will it into reality. Not immediately, in the case of figure-fixing, but after certain steps have been carried out.

ACTION for today: Make an appointment with your doctor. If you are more than a dozen pounds above normal weight for your build, it is important to have a checkover at the start. Your goal is buoyant health and normal weight.

Buy these foods (if you fix meals at home). All menus in the willpower building series will be built around the protective essentials: eggs, yellow cheese, lean meat, fish or fowl, buttermilk or skim milk, green vegetables (string beans, spinach, others later), yellow vegetables, carrots, wax beans, baking potatoes (small), salad material including dark green leafy vegetables, lettuce, celery, tomatoes, fresh fruits (apples, pears, tangerines), 100 percent whole grain bread, thinly sliced. Also a multiple vitamin concentrate—any brand furnishing normal amounts of vitamin.

This action will put starch in your willpower!

Making of Lamp Shades at Home Need No Longer Pose a Problem; Wire Frames Are Now Available

DEAR ANNE:
I have some lovely material that I would like to use for lamp shades in my living room. Only stumbling block: Where can I find wire frames? I have searched all over town. V.G.S.

Ever since this column started, this has been a recurring problem with ambitious readers who want to make their own lam shades. I'm glad to say that, this time, have a local firm to suggest that has a larg stock of wire shade frames.

A G street store has just gotten in 15 different styles, ranging from 6 inch frame to 30 inch ones. They're not particularl cheap, because they're good quality an wholesale and shipping charges are con siderable. But with them you can make you own beautiful shades with the fabric of you choice. For more information, telephone th store at National 0140.

DEAR ANNE:
Is it possible to purchase anywhere in or near Washington unfinished oak furniture such as bookcases, chests, and table top desks? I would like to furnish my bedroom with limed oak furniture and would prefer to do the finishing myself. I understand the pine available in most stores does not have the right grain for this finish. Would it be possible to get the wood cut ready for fitting together as can be done with pine?

Two local shops that specialize in unfinished furniture tell me that they have a few oak pieces. One, on Connecticut avenue, has solid oak chests in several styles and a three-sectional oak desk, and will make the bookcases. (The telephone number there is STerling 5548.) The other shop, located on K street, can provide you with unfinished oak tables and bookcases. (Telephone number, STerling 5648.)

ONE OF THE new plastic "sugar plum trees" plus some bright red maraschinoes or dark sweet cherries make a pretty centerpiece for a George Washington's birthday table.

As to having the oak cut for fitting together, you might have this done at some lumber yard. However, you would have to provide the specifications and it would probably be troublesome and costly.

DEAR ANNE:
Won't you please give me a recipe for frozen fruit pudding. Can you include suggestions of how to serve when one doesn't have a mold?
Mrs. T. J. Moran,
120 C st., ne.

Is this the sort of pudding you have in mind? It could be served in dessert glasses or bowls, topped with a dash of whipped cream and a cherry. Or you could put generous scoops of it on slices of plain cake and serve with cherry garnish.

FROZEN FRUIT PUDDING

3 ounces cream cheese, ¾ cup heavy cream, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2/3 cup shredded pineapple, 1 cup small thin slices avocado, ¼ cup chopped dates, 1 cup thinly sliced cooked, canned, or frozen peaches, dash salt, 12 maraschino cherries, halved.

Cream the cheese. Add ¼ cup cream gradually, stirring until smooth. Add lemon juice and sugar. Whip remaining ½ cup cream thick but not stiff and fold into cheese mixture. Combine carefully with prepared fruits. Pour into freezing tray of refrigerator and freeze until firm. This recipe, serves eight to ten persons. Substitutes may b made in the fruits.

Alexandria School Board Reforms Urged

The Alexandria League of Women Voters yesterday urged reforms in local school board nominations, school board organization and greater control by the board over its fiscal affairs.

Alexandria's schools have been improved and enlarged during the last decade, the league stated, and its recommendations were made in the hope of "contributing to a continued improvement in our schools."

The changes were recommended by the league in a "fact sheet" entitled "School Business Is Your Business," describing the present school system as comparing favorably with others in the methopolitan area but subject to continued expansion.

Encouragement of more public participation in the nomination of School Board candidates and in their appointment by the City Council was urged by the Alexandria women's group to strengthen the appointment procedure.

This would include making public announcements that nominations from the public are in order, drawing up a clearly defined procedure for public nominations, such as the petition method, and having the council vote as a whole on all nominees.

At present, the council makes no public announcements when School Board terms are about to expire. Organizations and even candidates offer their names to the council, the "fact sheet" pointed out. The council's school committee reviews the names of candidates and makes its recommendations, which are usually accepted.

The present work load at the central school administrative office is "very heavy, and particularly unfair" to the superintendent of schools, said the report, urging that the State Department of Education be asked to recommend a plan for more equitable distribution of the professional and clerical work.

The regular monthly meeting conflicts with City Council meetings, the report pointed out, and the league urged changing the meeting day from Tuesday so interested parties can attend both school board and council meetings. The board also should consider meeting more frequently than once a month, minutes should be indexed and by-laws brought up to date, according to the report.

The School Board was urged to make regular public reports on its funds and to review in public session its responsibilities toward funds for textbooks, cafeterias, athletic associations and individual school activities. These funds are not considered public monies by the board and are not regularly audited, the report said.

In other recommendations, the league asked for improved budgeting and budget control, and urged more public information on the progress of the school system.

Thieves Rifle Bottling Firm Safe of $1148

A safe in Dr. Pepper Bottling Co. office at 6101 Blair rd. nw. was rifled of $1148 Saturday night by thieves who broke through a second floor window, burned off the safe door and unbolted a steel money chest inside.

Police reported the housebreakers used a small ladder left on the scene to reach the roof of a one-story section of the building. Breaking an adjacent second-floor window to get in, they burned off the safe door with an acetylene torch, which they left, behind, police said.

The money chest inside the safe, bolted in place, was missing along with its contents, $848. In addition $300 was taken from a petty cash drawer in the safe, according to police.

The theft was discovered about 5:50 a. m. yesterday when Pvts. Andre Tyser and Oliver P. Williamson of the Sixth Precinct saw an open door in the first floor of the building.

I could never begin to put in writing the REAL meaning of this opportunity. It is difficult to write an ad that will attract the attention of good men due to the fact that so many advertisements appear in the paper. If you have ever sold before, or think you possess the ability to be trained, do not hesitate! Our training program is very extensive and is taught by "top men" in our company.

Police Press Bank Holdup Investigation

Investigators of Friday's $28,351 bank robbery yesterday were still following up a report by a military policeman that he had been ordered at gun point "to lay off the case."

Police said they found no new leads in running down the story of Corpl. Homer Bass of 1220 B st. se.

Bass told the FBI Saturday that he stopped three men for speeding on the Walter Reed Hospital grounds about the time of the robbery on Friday. The spot was less than a block from the branch of the Hamilton National Bank at Georgia and Alaska ave. nw., which an armed trio stuck up.

Later Saturday Bass reported one of three men in a dark car stopped him and warned him he would be killed if he didnt "lay off the case."

Police were kept busy running down numerous telephone tips of suspicious men in various sections of town, but none amounted to anything.

'Mr. Jones, Meet the Master'

Direct Communion With God Involves an 'Imaginative' Faith

FOREWORD

There are no other sermons like Peter Marshall's. For there was no other man like Peter Marshall.

The beloved Chaplain of the United States Senate, Peter Marshall passed away recently at the age of 46. He had attained a national reputation at an age when most clergymen are still unknown.

The Washington Post during the early Lenten season is publishing the richest passages from Peter Marshall's most vigorous sermons. They were preached in Washington's historic New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. They were addressed to the man he called "Mr. Jones," to the multitude of clerks and taxi drivers, butchers and housewives, motormen and the lonely girl in the hospital ward.

Taken from the book, "Mr. Jones, Meet the Master," the sermons preserve the emphasis of his words, by a special typographical style. The manuscripts are presented exactly as Peter Marshall prepared them.

MEET THE MASTER

By Peter Marshall

Our country is full of Joneses,
And they all have problems of one kind or another.
"All God's chillun' got trouble these days."
The Church has always contended that God can solve these problems through the individual's personal fellowship with a living Lord.
Let's put the question bluntly, as bluntly as Mr. Jones would put it.
Can you and I really have communion with Christ as we would with earthly friends?
Can we personally know that same Jesus Whose words are recorded in the New Testament,
Who walked the dusty trails of Galilee two thousand years ago?
I don't mean can we treasure His words or try to follow His example or imagine Him.
I mean is He really alive?
Can we actually meet Him,
commune with Him,
ask His help for our everyday affairs?
The Gospel writers say "yes."
A host of men and women down the ages say "yes."
The church says "yes."
I realize that to the man in the street it is quite puzzling to speak about the "Chief" guiding one's life, arranging the details of every day existence.
To say that John Smith, working in an office, can directly, and in full possession of his faculties, get into communication with God sounds almost fantastic.

But that is precisely what I do mean—that the housewife standing in her kitchen over a pile of dishes . . .
and the student reading in the library until midnight . . .
and the street car motorman ringing his bell through the city traffic . . . .
that the lonely one in the hospital ward . . .
Can be in direct communion with God.
That is exactly what this imaginative faith involves.
Since this is true, do we realize what a tremendous, breath-catching fact it is?
Do you realize how significant it is for you?
It means that no single event in your life will ever have to be faced alone—neither sorrow nor bereavement pain nor loneliness
joy nor laughter pleasure nor fun.
The Gospel writers say that at the beginning of Christ's ministry, He chose twelve men . . . "that they might be with Him."
They were very ordinary men.

By our standards of judgment, not a single one of them would have been considered disciple material.
Tax collectors fishermen peasants simple folk, unlettered for the most part with no special qualifications.
But as Christ chose them He was seeing, not so much what they were, as what they were to become.
The clue to their selection was that they were to be with Him.
That was the beginning of their development and their transformation.
They heard the music of His voice.
They watched His slow smile.
They saw the sunlight dancing on His hair
They saw Him perform miracles.
They heard Him tell unforgettable parables.
He told them that when they had seen Him, they had seen the Father.
And then came ebbing popularity and the shadow of the Cross.
Was their fellowship to end with His death?
Their testimony is that it did not—that the fellowship not only survived death but was consummated after it through His Resurrection.
It is an astounding claim to make.
They claim that in the days between the Resurrection and the Ascension, Jesus established this friendship, so that it would be available to men in all ages.
Have you ever wondered about the Resurrection appearances?
Have you ever wondered why, when Jesus met Mary in the garden, He would not let her touch Him?
It was because He wanted to take her beyond the evidence of sight and touch.
He wanted her to learn that she could realize His presence without the need of eyes or hands.
He was busy bridging the gap, planting the friendship in the unseen.

There is a glorious promise given in the days of old that has not yet faded from the written record:
"If with all your hearts ye truly seek me, ye shall ever truly find me."
Ah, there perhaps is our first clue—"If with all your heart" . . .
Ask yourself, am I after all seeking God with my whole heart?
Or must I say in all honesty, "I want God and yet I don't want Him.
I want to find Him and yet I don't, for I would be afraid to . . .
Or, I would not want Him to find me just yet . . .
Am I really seeking God with my whole heart?"
Then there is another side to the picture. I wonder if we are brave enough to face it?
Perhaps there are times, when some of us "want God as we want a hot water bottle at night"—to help us over some temporary discomfort.
Or we look to God to help us, when we stand in the roadway looking for a passing motorist to push us to the next gas station.
But we can't treat God that way!
We simply can't think of God as a kind of luncheon club president, or as a telephone operator who will always answer whenever we lift the receiver
Nor must we think of Him as a department store shipping clerk, who nightly arranges the orders and sends them sliding down the chutes while we sleep, to greet us in the morning.
We are guilty of the most terrible presumptions!

We want to see the Kingdom Come, but meanwhile we vote against the Kingdom.
We want to be Christians, but we don't want our friends to think we are queer.
We are against strong drink, but we must be sociable
We long for purity, but we covet popularity.
Most of us are too familiar with this conflict.
We want to play on both sides.
We want to be friends with everybody.
But He said long ago "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon."
Yet many of us have settled down to a compromise.
We are willing to serve in His church, but we compromise on the number of services we shall attend, for we must also serve the world.
We will support the church financially, but not as much as we might, for we must also support the things that are not of the church.
Then we wonder why we cannot have a real thrilling satisfying communion with God.

God is not hiding—but we are!
God is not pretending—look at the Cross!
But we are pretending. Look into your own heart and see.
It is possible for you and for me to live in this world as sure that the Lord is with us, as we can be sure of anything—to have no fear at all to be able to anticipate tomorrow with a thrill of delight to have no fear of anything—neither of sickness nor unemployment nor loneliness
nor death
nor anything all.
It is possible for us to be as sure as Paul was.

For if you let Him take control of your life completely, if you are willing to bow to His will for you, then you will enter into the transforming fellowship which brings with it that glorious exhilaration, that indescribable peace, and escape from all bondage promised in the New Testament.
Then you will never doubt again that fellowship with this living Lord is possible, but you will discover that it is the most glorious fact in our whole world.
You will never argue about it again, because you will have experienced it.
"The love of Jesus—what it is—None but His loved one know" .
Ah, yes, but they know.

FTC Charges Illegal Fees To 13 Stores

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday ordered 11 clothing manufacturers to stop granting, and 13 retail stores to stop receiving, alleged "unlawful" brokerage fees in connection with the sale and purchase of women's apparel.

As outlined by the FTC, the 13 stores are members of a corporation — National Modes, Inc., — which purchases clothing from manufacturers and received special deductions. These deductions, the FTC charges, were passed on to the stores in the form of special advertising and promotion services.

FTC said this is in violation of the "brokerage" section of the revised Clayton Anti-trust Act.

The order also is directed against National Modes, Inc., and National Modes Holding Corp., and John Block, an officer-director of both corporations.

Manufacturers named in the commission's announcement of its order are:

Junior Deb Coat & Suit Co., Eclipse Knitting Mills, Inc., Morris W. Haft Bros., Inc., Grossman & Spiegel, Inc., Henry Rosenfeld, Inc., Fred Perlberg, Inc., Shelton Coat Corp., Shipman & Baker, Inc., and Hyman Schreier and Ethel Schreier, copartners trading as H. Schreier Co., all of New York City, and Junior Guild Frocks, Inc., and Godett & Gross, Inc., both of Chicago.

Named in the retailer group are: Arnold Costale & Co., and Ogus, Rabinovich & Ogus, Inc., both of New York; Auerbach Co., Salt Lake City; Best's Apparel, Inc., Seattle, Wash.; Fowler, Dick & Walker, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Hale Brothers Stores, Inc., San Francisco; A. Harris Co., Dallas, Tex.; the Hecht Co., Washington, D. C.; Popular Dry Goods Co., El Paso, Tex.; Ames & Brownley, Inc., Norfolk, Va.; Dalton Co., Baton Rouge, La.; King's Inc., Johnson City, Tenn., and E. M. Scarbrough & Sons, Austin, Tex.

Increase of 5% In New Home Cost Predicted

By Conrad P. Harness
Post Reporter

Chicago, Feb. 19.—A five percent price increase for home construction in 1950 was predicted today by Rodney Lockwood, president of the National Association of Home Builders.

Lockwood based his forecast on several factors; higher steel prices, new wage demands, increased costs of land improvement and expected competition for men and materials from public housing programs.

Prefabricated homes were well represented here, with five of the largest manufacturers exhibiting.

National Homes Corp., which last year produced 10,000 units, or one percent of the homes st... announced it had awarded its washington-area franchise to Paul Crandall, veteran developer. He is expected to make news this spring with a two-bedroom home that, with lot, will sell for less than $7000.

Eighty-five Washington members of the Home Builders Association were among the estimated 15,000 persons attending the exposition.

Eternal Fame

The ones who are intelligent . . . Should say a prayer of thanks . . . And not belittle those who fill . . . The less developed ranks . . . For there is no importance in . . . The wisdom we amass . . . Except as we employ it for . . . The good of every class . . . The literati and the skilled . . . Who hold their noses high . . . Are not the ones whose lustrous stars . . . Will linger in the sky . . . They are the vain and selfish and . . . The blind who do not see . . . That they are gifted only by . . . God's generosity . . . But those who humbly strive to share . . . Their genius and their lore . . . Possess the prominence that will . . . Endure for evermore.

Count the letters in your first name. Subtract four if the number is six or more. Add three if the number is less than six. Then you have the key number. Check each key number left to right. The letters under the checks form a message.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Only a Cad Would Take A Woman Literally

Inasmuch as the lady at our house never has "a thing to wear," I think it's mighty strange that she can't spare her husband an itty bitty portion of the bedroom closet.

STREET SCENE

Paragon of civic virtue: The uniformed cop who parked his private car in the No Parking zone at 7th and F sts. nw., and leisurely strolled into Hecht's.

PROPOSITION

Regular readers of this column know that I have been searching for years for a laundry that understands the meaning of "No starch."

Currently, I think my search is almost over. Lawyer Harry S. Wender tells me:

"I like a wee dab of starch in my shirts. I think none at all is as bad as too much.

"But my experience has been that I can never get a happy medium. Either I get none at all, or my shirts come back as stiff as ramrods.

"Maybe you and I can work out a deal. Your laundryman thinks 'No starch' means a little bit of starch; my laundryman thinks 'a little bit' means none.

"Why don't you and I trade laundries? I'll tell you where you can get no starch if you tell me where I can get a little bit."

Okay, Harry—but you tell me first. I'm not letting any lawyers get an edge on me.

12 O'CLOCK HIGH

Eugen Weisz, vice-principal of the Corcoran Gallery's art school, has precipitated a timely crisis at that institution.

He started it with a seemingly innocent question directed at Eleanor B. Swenson, curator of American art.

"What time is 12 p. m.?" he asked. "Is it noon, or midnight?"

"Why it's midnight, isn't it?" replied Miss Swenson, somewhat dubiously. "Or is it noon?"

"I don't know," said Weisz, blandly. "I'm just asking. The February Calendar we mailed out says that on Mondays the gallery opens at 12 p. m., and I wondered whether that was noon or midnight."

Inasmuch as art galleries seldom open for business at midnight, the intended meaning was pretty obvious. But Miss Swenson took her doubts to the Corcoran's assistant director, John P. Leeper, who has charge of the gallery's publications.

"Gosh," said Leeper, "now that you mention it, I'm not so sure. Let's get an authoritative opinion."

So he looked in an unabridged Webster. No help. He called the Public Library. They referred him to the Library of Congress. The Division of Public Reference couldn't help, and turned him over to the Meteorological Division. The Meteorological Division was stumped, too.

Cartoonist Herblock passed the story along to me, and I said: "Herb, for once in my life I can be useful. I know where to get the official answer."

It's in the Government Printing Office Style Manual. Noon may be written "12 m." Midnight is "12 p. m." The Corcoran's Calendar was wrong, because "m." is the abbreviation for "meridian"—the time at which a heavenly body is at its highest point; in other words, "noon." The "p." in "p. m." stands for "post," or "after."

Suggestion: It might help to minimize confusion if we'd use simple English, and write it: "noon" and "midnight."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Small, black female puppy, mixed breed, about 3 months old." (Chestnut 7351 after 9 a. m.)

"All-white female spitz, 5 years old." (Ludlow 1-7338.)

"Cute, playful, housebroken kitten, 5 weeks old." (Hudson 5815 before 9:30 a. m. or after 5 p. m.)

"Four lovable female puppies, 8 weeks old; their mother is a German shepherd." (Columbia 8999 after 6 p. m.)

"Medium-sized, healthy housebroken pup, 4 months old, extremely pleasant disposition with children." (Juniper 7-9050.)

The other day I ran a little paragraph about the peculiarity of such expressions as "night falls, but day breaks," and "it doesn't make any difference whether you slow up or slow down."

Two District Liners take it from there. Mrs. David Modell of No. 4 8th st. se. observes:

"When night falls, it's a good idea to play safe and slow down—or up—as you prefer. But don't speed up, or you may have to speed down—to Traffic Court."

Harry Stern of 336 Madison st. nw. injects a new note regarding transportation terms. He writes: "Isn't it strange that merchandise sent across land is called a shipment, whereas goods sent by boat are known as a cargo?"

THE KITTENS ARE OUT OF THE BAG

My most unusual phone call of the season:

The man at the other end started with: "Is it true that you sometimes try to find homes for stray kittens?"

Gracious! How do you suppose he found out?

LOVE'S LABOR LOST

W. M. Devine wonders whether we've heard about the girl who knew all the answers but wound up an old maid anyhow. No man ever asked her the right questions.

69th Year Helping Build Greater Washington

Congress Heights

. . . Located above Bolling Field, Congress Heights has as its eastern boundary the District Line. Saint Elizabeth's Hospital marks the northern extremity. Xenia Street the southern.

Because of its lofty situation, a bluff above the Anacostia River, Congress Heights is said to "overlook" the towering Washington Monument. Congress Heights, like Randle Highlands, was first developed under the leadership of Colonel Charles Randle.

Similarly instrumental in promoting the growth of the Nation's Capital is the Washington Permanent Building Association. Your neighbors and friends, home owners in this community, have found safe, sound planning and quick action in home loans from our friendly organization. Woodlawn Unit Seeks $82,000 In Fund Drive

Woodlawn Foundation will open an $82,000 fund drive Wednesday—Washington's birthday—headed by Gen. Thomas Holcomb, USMC, ret., J. W. Rixey Smith, foundation president, announced yesterday.

The national campaign under the direction of General Holcomb, former Commandant of the Marines, will continue through Historic Garden Week, April 29.

Woodlawn lies on a hill overlooking the Potomac and Mount Vernon, and is just north of Fort Belvoir on Route U. S. 1. The Woodlawn estate, now comprising 137 acres, is that part of Mount Vernon which George Washington gave as a wedding present to his adopted daughter, Nellie Custis, and his nephew and aide, Lawrence Lewis.

The foundation is campaigning for funds to reduce the debt incurred when the estate was purchased in 1949, for making repairs essential to the preservation of the mansion, and will earmark other portions for a gradual restoration of the gardens, refurnishing of the mansion and development of an educational program.

Woodlawn is open to the public from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. throughout the year.

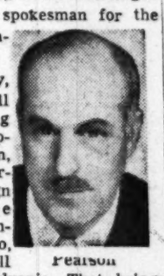
Lewis Calls Operators 'Tenpins'

By Drew Pearson

During one part of the recent meeting of coal operators with John L. Lewis, Lewis challenged Bert Manley, spokesman for the Far West operators:



Pearson

"Mr. Manley, you know you'll sign anything the Illinois operators will sign, the Illinois operators will sign anything the Ohio mine owners will agree to, and Ohio will follow Pennsylvania. That brings us to George Love (president of the Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Company). When Love signs, the whole lot of you will fall down like tenpins.

"The trouble with you gentlemen is you don't know how to think for yourselves. You're too easily coerced by the big banking interests that control you."

"Speaking of coercion," acidly shot back Love, "how about all those men on your picket lines who are keeping the mines from reopening? I guess you'd call that coercion."

Lewis said the operators would have to meet two "conditions" before he would consider a new contract: (1) All lawsuits against him by operators who are demanding damages for their strike losses would have to be dropped, (2) any operators who held back payments into the miners' pension-welfare fund during the strike must pay up pronto.

Lewis somberly read the list of lawsuits against him, running into millions of dollars.

"I trust that you gentlemen will see to it that these suits are dismissed," he served notice. "The United Mine Workers' lawyers will await your pleasure. As for those deadbeat operators who have held back their honorable obligations to the welfare fund, they had better repay their indebtedness if they expect us to meet with them in good faith."

Note — There may be a lot of truth to Lewis's allegation that Western and Midwestern operators have been waiting for George Love of Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal to set the pattern for settlement. This has sometimes appeared to be the case in the past.

Frankie Costello

Some of New York's high-powered publicity experts have been touting a Hollywood actor's recent attempt to have Frankie Costello deported. Here is what this columnist said about Costello on July 21, 1947, almost three years ago:

"The kingpin of American gamblers, once the biggest liquor racketeer in the country, Frankie Costello, could be deported from the United States if anyone really wanted to get tough about it.

"Frankie Costello migrated here from Italy around 1895 and became a naturalized citizen in 1925. At the time Costello took the oath of citizenship, however, he glossed over certain things which, if discovered in the record of any other less powerful person, would cause him to lose his citizenship and be deported.

"For instance, Costello did not tell the Government, when he took the oath as a citizen, that he had previously served a term in jail for carrying a concealed weapon. . . ."
